CUBA.

Gen. Lesca Pushing into the Interior—Engagements at Coloma de St. Domingo and Guanaja.

HAVANA, Saturday, Feb. 27.

It is reported that the insurgents lingering in the vicinity of Santiago de Cuba have again cut the aqueduct, causing much inconvenience to the citizens.

Official information has been received that Gen. LESCA, strongly reinforced, is pushing his way into the interior from La Guanaja. The insurgents were stationed in force on the road near Magarabomba. It was expected that the troops would soon attack them.

Gen. PUELLO has arrived at Cienfuegos with reinforcements. The troops there will be divided into three detachments. One under PUELLO will go to Santo Espiritu, one under LETONA to Villa Clara, and the remaining division, under PAEZ, will march to the Sierra Morena and Macagua.

An engagement took place between the Spanish troops and the insurgents at Coloma de St. Domingo, in the province of Sagua la Grande. Many were killed on both sides. The result of the battle is not known.

Reports from Cuban sources say that a fight occurred between the rebel forces under Gen. QUESADA and the army of Gen. LESCA on the road from Guanaja, and assert that the Government troops were routed.

The emigration of the Cubans is undiminished. Every steamer that leaves the port is crowded with passengers.

Additional supplies of troops are needed from Spain to occupy the whole island and drive out the insurgents. The troops now here can do no more than hold their own. Meantime the people in the country are suffering all kinds of privation and distress, and their complaints are heartrending. Thousands are leaving their homes and seeking refuge in the cities.

The steamer Cuba sailed to-day for Baltimore.

HAVANA, Sunday, Feb. 28.

Rumors are circulating in the city to-day that expeditions from the American shore to aid the insurrection have landed near Remedios and Guedrillas.

Some of the Cubans declare their belief that as soon as Gen. GRANT is inaugurated President he will recognize the belligerent rights of the revolutionary Government in Cuba.

Cuban accounts contradict Government dispatches announcing that Gen. LESCA is making a triumphant advance from La Guanajas.

Mr. HALL, the efficient Consul of the United States at Matanzas, will assume the functions of Consul-General at Havana.

The steamer Montezuma has arrived here, bringing the crew of the American schooner Nellie True, of Portland, Me., lost on Puerta Mulas.

Speculators in sugar show a disposition to withdraw from the market; they fear a reaction in consequence of the indications yesterday of a heavy decline.

An insurrection was attempted last week in Barcelona, but it was quickly suppressed. About forty persons connected with the conspiracy have been arrested. The City is now perfectly tranquil.

MEXICO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sunday, Feb. 28.

The report is untrue that Gen. CANTO made his escape while being conveyed to Durango to stand trial for the murder of Gen. PATONI. He arrived at Durango on the 8th of January, and was delivered up to the tribunal which will decide his case.

The object of Gen. NEGRETE'S pronunciamiento at Peubla was to capture a conducta with three millions of dollars in gold which had set out from the City of Mexico for Vera Cruz. The movement had no political purpose whatever. Gen. NEGRETE had five hundred men with him, but they fled, together with their leader, on the approach of the Government troops sent against them.

The Mexican Government has declared null and void the contract made with the California, Oregon and Mexico Steamship Company, on the ground that the latter have not complied with the stipulated conditions.

The Mexican frigate Juarez still lies sunk in the Bay of Pichitnego, and all efforts to raise her will probably be abandoned.

The National Guard has been effectively organized throughout the State of Sinaloa, and is doing excellent service against the Apache Indians on the borders of Chihuahua and Sonora.

Gen. VEGA has been appointed Governor of Lower California.

Rich gold diggings have been discovered near Cape Todos Santos, in the northern section of Lower California.

Gen. GUTIERREZ, who has for some time past been at the head of a band of robbers and kidnappers in the State of Durango, has at last been captured and delivered over to the authorities. He attempted to make his escape by bribing his guard, offering them $64,000, but without effect.

WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Feb. 28.

The hotels to-day have been full of the current of rumor and gossip concerning Cabinet matters, the chief topic being Gen. GRANT'S latest determination not to even notify the persons of his selection until he sends their names to the Senate, which he will do on Friday next, and which he could do tomorrow, so far as his readiness is concerned. He has said within a day or two that his recent experience has more than ever convinced him of the propriety of the course he has hitherto pursued respecting his Cabinet selections, and a great many people who have been disposed to find fault with his reticence now heartily approve it. One strong reason why Gen. GRANT should be left perfectly free to choose his own advisers, on his own responsibility, lies in the fact that he intends to change, in a great measure, the present manner of making appointments. He will, except upon his own invitation, decline to receive or listen to applications for office, but will refer all cases to the proper heads of departments for investigation, and will hold them responsible for their recommendations. This will relieve the Presidential office of a great deal of annoyance and much useless occupation of the President's time.

Some further perturbation was caused among the Pennsylvanians to-day by the announcement that Hon. M. MCKENNAN, of Pennsylvania, arrived last evening and was received at the depot in Gen. GRANT'S carriage and conveyed to his house. This was unfortunate as well as untrue. Mr. MCKENNAN is an able lawyer of Western Pennsylvania, and has been mentioned by some as Gen. GRANT'S probable choice from that State, but he came to Washington on this occasion of his own motion, and did not ride in GRANT'S carriage, nor go to his house, but went to the residence of his representative, Hon. GEO. V. LAWRENCE. This afternoon he visited Gen. GRANT, in company with his son-in-law, Col. SMITH, who is a relative of Mrs. GRANT, but of Cabinet matters he knows nothing whatever. It is proper to say, however, that some people look upon the choice as very probable. He is esteemed the ablest lawyer in that part of the State, is about fifty years of age, a man of great integrity of character, who has always declined office, no matter what the temptation. He is a warm personal friend of Gen. GRANT, and is entirely free from connection with any of the factions of the dominant party in that State. His father—Hon. THOS. M. T. MCKENNAN—was ten years in Congress, from 1831 to 1839, and 1841 to 1843, and was highly esteemed by HENRY CLAY, whose intimate associate he was, and who frequently stopped at Mr. MCKENNAN'S house when he traveled the Cumberland road back and forth from Washington. The appointment, if made, would please all parties in Pennsylvania; and these particulars are given to show that it is not impossible, though the gentleman himself has no idea of it.

THE PUBLIC CREDIT BILL.

The Senate passed the Public Credit bill at 11:55 last night, after a very able debate, in which the Democrats got warmed up by the taunts of FESSENDEN, which were as sharp as his irascible nature could make them. The bill passed in the strong form in which it was reported from the Senate Finance Committee, the proviso about specie payments in the first section being stricken out. The only amendment made after the bill got into the Senate was an immaterial one at the close of the second section. It will come to the House to-morrow morning for concurrence. As it lacked three of having a two-thirds vote on its original passage, it may not be possible to get a suspension of the rules, which requires two-thirds at once; but it will certainly be reached in a day or two in regular order, when business on the Speaker's table is taken up. Although the proviso in the first section was originally inserted to strengthen it in the House, yet it passed by such a strong vote that no doubt is now entertained of the concurrence of the House in the Senate's amendments.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Senators NYE and STEWART, Representative D. R. ASHLEY and Hon. THOMAS FITCH, member elect, constituting the delegation in Congress from Nevada, have telegraphed the Constitutional Suffrage Amendment to the Nevada Legislature, and hope to have it ratified before the adjournment of that body, which adjourns on the 2d of March.

THE LAST CABINET MEETING.

The last Cabinet meeting of the present Administration will be held on Tuesday next, when the extent, if any, to which the present Cabinet will participate in the inaugural ceremonies will be decided. It is already understood that Secretaries SEWARD, MCCULLOCH, WELLES, BROWNING and Postmaster-General RANDALL will tender their resignations to President JOHNSON, to take effect with the close of his Administration. Secretary SEWARD will leave at once for Auburn. Mr. FREDERICK SEWARD, Assistant Secretary of State, will remain a short time to settle up family affairs, and to turn over the Department to the incoming Secretary. For Mr. SEWARD this closes a continuous residence of twenty years in Washington—twelve as Senator, and eight as Cabinet officer.

THE RECONSTUCTION OF SENATE COMMITTEES.

The Senate Committees will have to be reconstructed after the admission of fifteen new Senators on the 4th of March. Of the retiring Senators, three are Chairmen of important committees, viz.: VAN WINKLE on Pensions, CONNESS on Mines and MORGAN on the Library. It will also be necessary to elect a new President pro tem. of the Senate.

MR. WASHBURNE'S HEALTH.

Hon. E. B. WASHBURNE has so far recovered his health that he will go to the House of Representatives to-morrow for a short time.

MILITARY RECONSTRUCTION ORDER.

President GRANT will issue on the 5th of March a military reconstruction order, relieving Gen. BUCHANAN from the command of the Department of Louisiana, and placing Major-Gen. SHERIDAN in command; also relieving Gen. CANBY in the Department of TEXAS, and sending Gen. REYNOLDS back to the command from which he has so recently been relieved, but it has not yet transpired who will succeed him. The order will probably also include Gen. SICKLES for the Department of the South, now vacant by the absence of Gen. MEADE. The country will thus see that the very first act of Gen. GRANT is to put matters in the South on a basis which will insure safety for loyal men and the execution of the laws.

THE INAUGURATION.

Every railroad train brings large additions to the thousands of strangers already here to witness the inauguration. The hotels are full of guests, and their proprietors are renting all available premises in the city in their respective localities, in order to accommodate all applicants. The private boarding-houses are also crowded. Some parties have engaged quarters in Alexandria and Georgetown. From all accounts there will be at least twice as many visitors here as on any previous inauguration occasion. The struggle for precedence in the line of procession and the rival claims for consideration rendered the duties of the Committee in charge very difficult, and even now it is not certain that they may not be forced to make some alterations of the following order of procession: Fifth United States Cavalry, right; carriages for the President and Cabinet, left; carriages for the President elect and his Staff; United States Artillery; the Twelfth United States Infantry with its band; the Forty-fourth United States Infantry, with its band; the Marine Corps, with the Marine Band; volunteer military organizations from various parts of the country; the Washington Greys, of Philadelphia; the National Guard, of Philadelphia; the Burgess Corps, of Albany, N. Y.; the Fifth Regiment of the National Guard of Maryland; the Baxter Fire Zouaves of Philadelphia; the Supreme Court of the United States; the District Courts; the various diplomatic corps, ex-members of Congress and members elect, the municipal authorities of the Cities of Washington and Georgetown. The fire companies have not yet been assigned their places, but they will form a prominent feature in the procession.

A great number of companies from abroad will be present accompanying the local ones, to whom they have come as visitors. The reception and ball, on the evening of the 4th of March, promises to be more than ordinarily brilliant.

THE SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT.

Saturday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, Representative CLARKE, of Kansas, telegraphed the presiding officers of the two branches of the Legislature of that State that the Constitutional Amendment had passed Congress. At 8 o'clock in the evening of the same day he received the following dispatch:

TOPEKA, Feb. 27.

Hon. Sidney Clarke, M. C.:

The Constitutional Amendment was ratified by the Legislature to-day. The vote in the Senate was unanimous. In the House the vote stood 64 to 7.

(Signed,) M. S. ADAMS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
C. V. AKRIDGE,
President of the Senate.

THE FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

Mr. MCPHERSON, Clerk of the House of Representatives, has not yet completed the roll of members for the Forty-first Congress. Many of the credentials have not yet been received. The law requires the Clerk to place on the roll the names of all persons claiming seats as Representatives elect from States which were represented in the next preceding Congress, and of such persons only, and whose credentials show that they were regularly elected in accordance with the laws of their States respectively, or the laws of the United States.

THE HOUSE CONTINGENT FUND.

The Committee on Accounts, appointed to investigate the disbursement of the Contingent Fund of the House, said in a preliminary report last session, that evils existed in its disbursement which ought to be corrected, and now add that it is a great mistake to suppose that unnecessary expenses of the House are as numerous as some of the newspapers of the day represent them to be; neither is it true that any clear instance of fraud, involving large sums of money, can be traced to the door of any member of Congress or officer of the body. The evils consist of a multiplicity of petty assaults upon the Contingent Fund, amounting in the aggregate to a considerable sum, but by no means such as to satisfy the morbid taste for frauds which has been so industriously cultivated of late in the public mind. All demand upon the public moneys connected with the business of the House and not fixed by law are paid out of the Contingent Fund, and must be sanctioned by the Committee on Accounts. During the present Congress more than 4,200 matters, amounting in the aggregate to over $900,000, have been examined and passed upon by the Committee. The extremes are found in the highest contingent expenses in 1868, at $521,590, and the lowest in 1863, at over $198,141. The Committee say during the recent campaign one of the political parties obtained assistance from the employes of the House in the distribution of documents, as the other did from the Executive Department, and both parties had their documents folded at the House folding-room at the expense of the Contingent Fund. The mischief was complained of by the Committee, but as it had the sanction of long precedent, all the Committee could do was to limit the labor, so diverted, as far as possible, to the surplus necessary to be retained during the recess; but their success in even this was by no means gratifying. Political organizations are strong, and the Committee themselves could not but be influenced by their desire to see their own respective political views disseminated.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Feb. 28.

The dedicatory services at the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church in this city to-day were of the most interesting character, and it has created more excitement in the religious community of Washington than anything that has occurred here for years. The services were announced to commence at 10½ o'clock, but as early as 9 o'clock there was assembled about the doors a crowd large enough to fill the body of the church even at that hour. Five minutes after the doors were opened every accessible spot upon the floor and in the galleries was occupied, except, perhaps, one-third of the seats near the pulpit, which had been reserved for members of Congress, ministers of the Gospel, and others.

Gen. GRANT and Mrs. GRANT, accompanied by their family and Mrs. GRANT'S father, arrived just as Bishop SIMPSON commenced his sermon. Gen. GRANT'S arrival created a momentary sensation, and persons in the galleries created a slight confusion in their efforts to see him, but the confusion was only temporary. Speaker COLFAX and Mrs. COLFAX had previously arrived, as had also Chief Justice CHASE, accompanied by Senator and Mrs. SPRAGUE. Among other distinguished gentlemen present were Senators CRAGIN, TRUMBULL, COLE, DOOLITTLE, PATTERSON of New-Hampshire, HENDRICKS, WILSON, and others; Representatives DAWES, JUDD, CHURCHILL, HUMPHREY, WASHBURN of Massachusetts, CORNELL, FIELDS, COLE, and many others. All these gentlemen were accompanied by ladies of their households.

The services were commenced at 10:30 o'clock by Bishop SIMPSON, who read a selection from the discipline appropriate to the occasion. The choir, which was composed of the best amateur performers in the city, selected from the choirs of all the churches, then sang the hymn commencing, "Before Jehova's awful throne," &c., to the familiar tune of "Old Hundred," the vast audience joining in the hymn. The venerable Dr. HAMILTON then offered a fervent prayer. Rev. Dr. KYNETT and Rev. ALFRED COOKMAN followed respectively in reading selections from the Scriptures. An anthem followed, after which Rev. Bishop SIMPSON delivered an eloquent and appropriate discourse.

At the close of the sermon, Rev. Dr. DEHAAS read the statement of the financial condition of the Church, showing that there is still a debt of $35,000, exclusive of the sum of $25,000 already subscribed. He added that he hoped that $25,000 would be raised in the meetings to-day. Quite a handsome sum was realized by a basket collection in the church, and besides, subscriptions of various sums were made. Among others who subscribed were Mr. OLIVER HOYT, of Connecticut, and Hon. THOMAS CORNELL, of New-York, who gave $1,000 each. A Mr. ARCHER, of New-York, gave $500; Speaker COLFAX, Hon. JACOB BENTON, of New-Hampshire Mr. HYDE, of New-York, and a number of other gentlemen gave $100 each. The sum of $10,000 was realized by these collections and subscriptions. The morning exercises closed with the dedicatory services as prescribed by the book of discipline.

It is estimated that there were at least 2,000 persons in and about the church edifice. Hundreds were unable to obtain admittance, and after vain efforts to get even inside the doorway, they were compelled to return to their homes. The afternoon service was also well attended, and by an audience as distinguished as that which so attentively listened to Bishop SIMPSON in the morning. The preacher, in the afternoon, was the distinguished English divine, Rev. W. MORLEY PUNSHON, who preached extempore from the fifth verse of the second chapter of the First Epistle of Peter. Mr. PUNSHON'S sermon was pronounced by all one of the most eloquent discourses ever listened to. At the conclusion of the sermon, subscriptions were again received, and about $2,500 was added to the amount received in the morning. Senator CATTELL contributed $500 and Senator HARLAN $100, and a number of smaller subscriptions were received.

This evening Rev. Dr. EDDY, of Chicago, preached to another immense congregation, and at the close of his sermon other subscriptions were received, which swelled the sum almost to the amount required.

The design of the structure is pure Gothic. It is built of brown stone, rough hewed, and the following are its dimensions: The building fronts seventy-five feet on C-street and 115 feet on Four-and-a-Half-street. It is about fifty feet in height. At the northeast corner of the structure is to be constructed a tower and spire, the utmost point of which will be 240 feet from the pavement. The main front of the church is from C-street, there being three large entrance ways, approached by brown-stone steps. The passageway of the lower vestibule is laid with encaustic tile. From the lower vestibule, four easy stairways, with walnut handrail and balust rade, rise to the upper or main floor by which the spacious audience-room is reached, by four heavily carved and ornamented doorways. The main audience-room, 85 feet deep by 75 feet wide, is by far the handsomest and most elaborate of the many fine churches in this city. The ceiling is about 20 feet high, the Gothic style of architecture being faithfully observed. Six heavy columns rise on either side, affording a support to galleries 12 feet 3 inches in width, extending around three sides of the room. These columns are heavily capped, and over these caps are arranged gas jets, sixteen to each cap, which at night brilliantly illuminate the room. The woodwork around the galleries is of black walnut, paneled with ash. All of the woodwork of this description has been oiled without being varnished. The pews in the galleries are thirty-six in number, eighteen on each side. The back and ends are of black walnut, with the seats neatly upholstered. On the main floor the pews, one hundred and thirty-eight in number, are slightly curved and finished in the same manner as those in the gallery. There is about three feet space between each pew, thus affording ample room for persons to pass those already seated. Each pew is furnished with a rack for hymn books and Bibles. The aisles are about five feet in width. The floor is handsomely carpeted with Brussels, of neat design and durable colors. At the south end of the room the pulpit has been located in an alcove. The wall in the rear of the pulpit is beautifully frescoed, and on either side is a panel, on one of which is inscribed the Ten Commandments, and upon the other the Lord's Prayer. The keystone of the arch above the pulpit is made of the stone from which Solomon's temple was erected, and bears upon its face the inscription, in Hebrew characters, "Jehovah Kireh." The front of the pulpit is of black walnut, and the design is chaste and beautiful. The panels are of olive wood from the garden of Gethsemane. On the front is a magnificently carved cross with the letters "I. H. S," crowned with a wreath of twining ivy, all in walnut. This handsome decoration was executed in Boston, and was presented to the church by friends in that city. The caps of the posts on either side of the pulpit are of olive-wood from the Mount of Olives. Between the front of the pulpit and the altar rail there is a vacant space of about four feet. The altar rail is two feet in height, of heavy black walnut, paneled with olive-wood. The whole appearance of the pulpit and altar is grand and imposing. The designs for the plaster ornaments with which the ceiling, walls and columns are decorated, are new and beautiful.

At the north end of the room is the gallery to be occupied by the choir, which will be under the direction of Prof. JOSEPH H. DANIEL. In this gallery a magnificent organ, the gift of CARLOS PIERCE, Esq., of Boston, has been erected by the maker, WM. A. JOHNSON, of Westfield, Mass. This beautiful instrument is twenty feet wide, twenty feet high, and thirteen feet deep. The woodwork of the front of the organ is of black walnut, carved in the Gothic style of architecture, corresponding with the edifice. It is what is known by organ builders as an "open front," the pipes being exposed. These pipes are beautifully painted in gold and colors, presenting an elegant appearance. Above the fancy work of the organ "a sunburst" is painted, forming a very handsome and appropriate finish to the front of the instrument. In the centre of the organ is placed a silver plate, on which is the following inscription: "Presented to the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church, and dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, by CARLOS PIERCE, of Boston, Mass."

A feature in the construction of the edifice was the idea suggested of making the windows of the church memorial tablets, commemorative of men and incidents prominent in the history of the Methodist Church. This idea has been carried out, and the magnificent stained-glass windows, as prepared by H. P. BLOOR, of Brooklyn, N. Y., elicit high enconiums. Each window has a design, motto and inscription. No. 1 has for its design the death of WESLEY, with the motto, "Our people die well," and is inscribed to the memory of the deceased Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church. No. 2, the old Strawbridge Church of Baltimore; motto, "What hath God wrought," and inscribed to the memory of Rev. ROBERT STRAWBRIDGE and THOMAS ANDERSON. No. 3 has for its design a representation of the old John-street Church, New-York, as it appeared in 1768. The motto is "The Lord hath done good things." The inspiration is dedicated to the memory of STEPHEN OLIN, D. D., NATHAN BANGS, D. D., JAMES FLAG, D. D., and JOHN KENNEDY, D. D., by the New-York East Conference. No. 4, design, the Old Elm of Boston; motto, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy," and is inscribed to the memory of Rev. JESSE LEE, the apostle of Methodism in New-England. No. 5, design, Paul at Athens; motto, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," inscribed to the memory of Rev. SAMUEL M. DICKSON and Rev. JOHN SUMMERFIELD, A. M. No. 6, design, Mary at the tomb of Christ; motto, "I am the resurrection and the life;" the inscription is: "The grateful offering of an only son to the memory of his sainted parents, EDWARD and ELIZA REVERE, and his sister, MARY E. REVERE, of New-York." Window No. 7 has for its design a representation of an itinerant minister on horseback, with the motto, "The world is my parish." The inscription is in memory of Rev. JOHN STRANGE, pioneer Methodist preacher in Indiana, and Rev. WILLIAM H. RAYNER, D. D., a member of the Cincinnati Conference. The design of window No. 8 is a Bible and crown with stars; the motto, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." The inscription is: "To the memory of Rev. RUSSELL BIGELOW, Rev. JOHN COLLINS and Rev. JACOB YOUNG, of the Ohio Conference." Window No. 9—design, Ethiopia stretching out her hands; the motto is, "Our fallen missionaries—go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." The inscription is: "In memory of FRANCIS J. WILEY, ANNA M. WENTWORTH and MARILLA P. PEIRCE, Female Missionaries who gave their lives to the cause." Window No. 10, has for its design, Moses and the burning bush, with the motto: "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." The inscription is "In memoriam MARK STEVENSON, M. D., died Aug. 28, 1865, aged 62 years, an eminent physician, and founder of the first German Sunday School in New-York." Window No. 11 has for its design a cross, crown and scales, with the motto, "To live is Christ, and to die is gain." The inscription is: "In memoriam, Hon. JOHN MCLEAN, LL.D., thirty-one years one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, died April 4, 1861. Hon. MOSES F. ODELL, for four years a member of Congress and twenty-one years Superintendent of Sand-street Sunday School, Brooklyn, N. Y., died June 13, 1860, aged 48 years." Window No. 12 has for its design a picture of the Good Samaritan, with the motto, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," Job xix., 25. "In memoriam, RALPH MEAD, Esq., of New-York, departed this life July 23, 1866, aged 77 years. All is well. Servant of God, well done." Window No. 13 has for its design a picture of a ship in a storm. The inscription is: "Dedicated to the memory of Rev. GEORGE COOKMAN: lost on board the steamer President, 1841, Chaplain of the United States Congress." Window No. 14 has for its design "The Star in the East." The motto is: "They rest from their labors, but their works do follow them." The inscription is: "WILBUR FISK, D. D., JOHN DEMPSTER, D. D., founders of Methodist Theological Schools in America." Window No. 15 has for its design, "Faith Personified," with the motto, "Let me die the death of the Righteous." The inscription is,: "Rev. CHAS. SHERMAN, of the Troy Conference." Window No. 16 has for its design a scroll, pen and sheaf of wheat. The inscription is: "THEODORE MILLS, sculptor." The Sabbath School or lecture-rooms are upon the ground floor, the windows of which are decorated in a similar manner. No. 1 is inscribed as the gift of SARAH A. HABDAY, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and has for its design a picture of Christ as the shepherd, with the motto, "Feed my Lambs." The three others have for designs Abraham leading Isaac to the sacrifice, the announcement of the birth of Christ to the shepherds, and Christ blessing little children, with appropriate mottoes. As this is a national church, there has been set apart one pew for each State and Territory in the Union, and one for the President and his Cabinet officers.

THE KUKLUX.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Feb. 28, 1869.

The Secretary of War has submitted to the House of Representatives, in compliance with the request of the Committee on Reconstruction, the accompanying copy of the report of Brevet Lieut.-Col. ROSE, United States Army, upon certain outrages committed in southwestern Virginia, together with a copy of the instructions of the commander of the First Military District to that officer.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF MARION, }
VIRGINIA, Jan. 12, 1869. }

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to report that, in compliance with special orders No. 78, dated Dec. 28, 1868, from headquarters sub-district of Lynchburg, Va., I proceeded to Lee County, Virginia, Jan. 6, 1869.

I first visited the colored woman at Cain Creek, who was shot near Jonesville, Lee County, Va. From her I learned that on Dec. 25, 1868, the colored people had a ball near Jonesville, Va., when a party of white men styling themselves Kuklux came into the house where the colored people were holding their ball, and deliberately fired their revolvers among them. One of the white men, named WM. WOODWARD, placed his pistol close to this colored woman and shot her through the body, inflicting a dangerous, and possibly a mortal wound. A warrant was issued for the arrest of WOODWARD by the civil authorities, but he is still at large.

I then proceeded to Mrs. CAINS', on Powell's River, where I stopped to dine. Mrs. C. is a rebel lady, but from her I learned that families of colored people had been passing her house for several days, fleeing from Turkey Cove, going she knew not whither. She said her old servant, GEORGE, who had been on her plantation all his life, was packed up to leave as soon as the gang of Kuklux should come along.

I then proceeded to Turkey Cove, where I arrived at dark, and stopped at the house of Mr. JONATHAN RICHMOND, expecting to stay there for the night. I was refused, because, they said, Mr. RICHMOND was very sick.

Upon inquiring of the people who came out of the house if there was not some trouble in this part of the country, a fellow by the name of DAN MCCULLY, a refugee from Tennessee, who was stopping at Mr. RICHMOND'S, answered no; that there had been some rows about an old nigger strumpet, that was all; but as I started off I was followed by a son of Mr. RICHMOND, who told me that that was not all, for the country was in perfect anarchy; that about 40 armed men of a secret organization styled Kuklux had been started up at the seminary, and that the members thereof had commenced driving off all the negroes. His father, he said, had tried to protect his negroes, when the Kuklux turned on him, drove off his tenants, white and black, and threatened his and his son's life.

I then proceeded further up the Cove and tried at several places to get lodgings, but was refused, until I finally relied on Jim after dark, at the house of Capt. PHIL. SLEMP, an ex-rebel officer, where I was received with great hospitality.

In conversation with Mr. SLEMP at supper he corroborated the statement of young RICHMOND, and said that he himself was under the ban of the Kuklux for the same cause that Mr. RICHMOND was; he also said that he expected an attack nightly, as they had already fired into the houses of several citizens and beaten several others unmercifully, &c.

The next day I summoned all the magistrates in Turkey Cove together and inquired of them about the condition of affairs. They fully corroborated the statements of young RICHMOND and Mr. SLEMP, but stated, as also did Mr. SLEMP, that all the good citizens of the Cove were opposed to the course pursued by the Kuklux.

I asked the magistrates what they had done to prevent this state of affairs. They answered that they had done nothing, because they did not know who the parties were who had committed these lawless acts, as they did everything after night. I asked them why they did not find out who committed these lawless deeds. These feeble-minded gentlemen said they were afraid to make a move for fear of their lives, and seemed astonished that I should ask such a question. I asked them why they did not summon their neighbors to assist them; they said they did not like to rely upon, because so many belonged to the Kuklux. I then asked each one separately if he did not know of a single man on whom to rely. After much hesitation on their part, and much impatience on mine, they answered in the affirmative. I again asked each of them if he did not know of two men on whom to rely, which each in like manner answered in the affirmative. I again asked each of them if he did not know of three men beside himself on whom to rely, and receiving an affirmative answer, ordered each to name them, and then called their attention to the fact that that was twenty-eight men, which was enough to do the whole work required. I also issued the order that they should summon these men and ferret out and arrest all persons who had been guilty of shooting and beating negroes and firing into the houses of citizens, and confine them in the Lee County Jail to await the action of the Military Commissioner. Also to arrest all persons, except travelers, found carrying guns, pistols, and weapons of any kind, and confine them in the Lee County Jail to await the action of the Military Commissioner.

I then proceeded to different parts of Turkey Cove and had communication, or rather conversation, with several persons whom I suspected as having been engaged in these lawless proceedings. I was convinced in most cases that my suspicions were correct, as the gentlemen took to the bush as soon as they could.

The negroes had fled, so I could not communicate with them; but I am convinced that they have been most inhumanly dealt with. They have been civil and industrious, and had collected plenty of provisions for the Winter. They have been driven shelterless, many of them from their life-long homes, in the midst of the most inclement season, for no other purpose than that their hard earnings might fall into the hands of white wretches who are too lazy to work.

After spending two days in that delectable country, I started back to my station.

In addition to my order to the Magistrates, I have ordered the Sheriff of Lee County, Va., to summon a posse and arrest Robert Anderson, Bill Anderson, Frank Riddle, Floyd Riddle, Yancey Maynors, Jonathan Ward, A. J. Estep and Wallace Woodward, and confine them in the Lee County Jail to await the action of the Military Commissioner.

In the event that these Magistrates and the Sheriff fail to do their duty, I would respectfully request that I be allowed, in the course of a few days, to take a squad of men and go to a point on the railroad that I shall select, and there mount my entire squad and proceed to Turkey Cove, which is about sixty miles from any railroad, and hunt these desperadoes down.

It would be perfectly useless to send troops on foot into that country after those scoundrels, unless it would be to station them up there, and that, at this season of the year, is impracticable.

I have little faith in the Sheriff and the Magistrates doing their duty, or that they will be much assisted by the citizens, because they all seem to me to be a set of poltroons—Kukluxes and all; yet in this I may be mistaken; and if they follow my instructions, there will be no need of sending any troops into that place.

I have probably made this report more prolix than necessary, yet the Major-General can form no idea of the condition of affairs in that county unless some particulars are mentioned, and not even then without visiting it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

RAILROAD COMMISSION.

AN ACT to authorize the construction of a railroad or railroads in the City and County of New-York, to be operated by steam or other motive power, for the benefit of the State and City of New-York, and to raise the necessary means for the construction of the same.

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Hamilton Fish, Marshall O. Roberts, Samuel J. Tilden, Edwin D. Morgan, Samuel Sloane, Alexander S. Diven, Moses H. Grinnell, the Mayor of the City of New-York ex-officio, the President of the Croton Aqueduct Board ex-officio, and the State Engineer ex-officio, shall constitute a Board of Commissioners, to be known as the "New-York Steam Railroad Commissioners," for the purpose of constructing and operating a steam railroad in the City and County of New-York, with the right to use a common seal, and under their said corporate name to sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, and to hold and own real and personal estate for the uses and purposes hereinafter mentioned. And they are hereby invested with all the powers and privileges, rights and franchises, not inconsistent with the terms of this act, which are conferred upon railroad corporations by the provisions of an act entitled "An act to authorize the formation of railroad corporations and to regulate the same," passed April 2, 1850, and the several acts amendatory of and supplemental to the same.

SEC. 2. The said Commissioners, except the said Mayor and State Engineer, shall be divided by lot into four classes of two each, who shall respectively hold their offices two, three, four and five years, from the 1st day of July next, and until their successors are chosen by the Legislature on joint ballot, and each Commissioner so chosen in the place of any Commissioner whose term of office expires shall hold office for five years. All vacancies shall be filled by the Legislature on joint ballot. Each Commissioner shall, before entering upon his office, qualify by taking an oath to faithfully discharge the duties thereof. They shall have power to employ engineers, surveyors, and such other persons as in their opinion may be necessary to enable them to perform their duties under this act, and may also elect one of their number to be the President of the Board, who shall be the principal executive officer, and shall receive such salary as they shall determine. They shall also have power to make by-laws for the government or regulation of the Board, and a majority of the Board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at any regular meeting of the Board, or any special meeting of which all have notice, as may be provided in the by-laws.

SEC. 3. The said Commissioners shall, as soon as practicable after their organization, adopt such plan as in their opinion shall be most advantageous for a railroad or railroads to be operated by steam across the Harlem River and through the City and County of New-York, and not upon the same grade with the streets therein. They shall, in determining the location of such road or roads, endeavor to place the same where they shall afford the greatest accommodation to the public, and, if in their judgment more than one re-munerative road on a northerly or southerly line may be constructed in any part of said City north of Union-square, they are authorized so to locate such roads. They may also locate such lateral east and west roads as in their jud

Facts and Figures Concerning the Climate, Soil and Productions of East Tennessee—The Growing Demand for Such News by Immigrants—The Knoxville Industrial Association.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KNOXVILLE, Wednesday, Feb. 24, 1869.

I wrote you a letter last week giving an account of a talk with Gen. WILDER, of Roane County, upon the iron, coal and marble of East Tennessee. On last Friday evening, Hon. O. P. TEMPLE, of this city, delivered an address before our Industrial Association, which contained many facts of great general interest kindred to those given in my last letter. I propose giving some of them for the information of those who are now looking to this part of the South with a view of making it their future home.

The geographical situation of our State is well known. It seems to me to possess the most wonderful natural advantages, and I have long wondered why its climate and great resources have not long since peopled it with a wealthier, more enterprising and more numerous population. Very much has been written and spoken concerning these resources, but there is still much to learn. Let the facts and figures I am about to give speak for us.

First, as to our climate. East Tennessee is begirt by high mountains. Some of them rise to the height of six thousand feet. The Valley of East Tennessee is about one thousand feet above the level of the sea; is about fifty miles wide and two hundred and fifty long. It is watered by clear, swift, rolling streams that are fed from the crystal springs of the mountains, and which furnish water power not equaled by New-England herself. The streams join and make the Holston, Clinch, French Broad, Emory and Tennessee Rivers. There are no stagnant bodies of water within our borders, hence we are free from malaria and noxious exhalations of every kind, and chills and fever are unknown to our people. Our Summers are moderate, and greatly tempered by the cool breezes from the mountains. Our Winters are mild and short. Snow seldom falls to any depth, and ice very rarely exceeds three inches in thickness. There are but few days in the Winter when it is that thick. No process of acclimation is necessary, and the immigrant can safely come any month in the year. The following meteorological tables are from the records of the East Tennessee University. I give the month of January, 1868, which was rather a cold month:

Mean temperature at 7 A. M.	32° 45
Mean temperature at 2 P. M.	37° 56
Mean temperature at 9 P. M.	35° 12
Mean temperature for the month	35° 05
Warmest day, mean temperature for 24 hours..	52° 16
Coldest day, mean temperature for 24 hours..	20° 16
Mean barometer height, reduced to freezing point for 31 days	29.080 inches.

The extreme temperatures during the year 1868 were 14° and 92°, giving a range of 78°. The range in Ohio is about 105°, in Missouri 100°, in Florida 75°. Mean temperature for the year about 60°. It is a rare thing for the mercury to go below 14°, or to rise above 92°. From 30° to 35° may be assumed as the mean of Winter, and 65° to 70° the mean of Summer.

The nights in the warmest and dryest Summers are always cool and pleasant. It is the experience of most Northern people who come to this part of the South that they do not suffer from the heat as much here as they did in the North. During the month of January last there were fifteen days that were fit for plowing and other out-door work. East Tennessee, as might be judged from these figures, is a very healthy country.

It appears from the census returns of 1860 that the per cent. of deaths in this section of the State was 1.08 in 1860 and 0.96 in 1850. The per cent. in the section including Ohio, Indiana and Illinois for the year 1860 was 1.32, and, in 1850, 1.19. The per cent. in Maine, New-Hampshire and Vermont for 1860 was 1.24, for 1850 was 1.24. The per cent. in the whole United States for 1860 was 1.27, for 1850 was 1.41. The deaths from consumption in Massachusetts for the year ending May 31, 1860, were 4,845, in a population of 1,231,066. The deaths for the same year from the same cause in Tennessee were 1,440 in a population of 1,109,801. From these figures it will be seen we are in the healthiest region in the United States. This seems to be generally understood, for there is scarcely a day passes but that some afflicted person comes here under the advice of his physicians, in search of health. So much for our climate.

As to the soil and products of our soil. From our situation we are peculiarly favored, being able to raise most of the products peculiar to the South, and about all peculiar to the North.

Our soil is not as rich as the new soil of the Western States. But the large number of our rivers give us a great extent of bottom lands, which are equal to any in the world. Our rolling lands are susceptible of high cultivation, and seem peculiarly adapted to wheat growing. The mountain and ridge land is good for grasses and fruit. The cattle range on the former from March until November, and fatten splendidly on the timothy grass and luxuriant vines. Timothy grows as high as six feet on the mountains. Such mountain lands may be purchased at from 30 cents to $1 per acre. Good improved farming lands can be bought at prices ranging from $5 to $25 per acre. Rich bottom lands range from $50 to $100. In some of the interior counties good farming lands can be bought at from $1 to $5 per acre. Fine ridge sides cultivated and adapted to fruit culture can be bought at from $5 to $10 per acre. Good grazing lands in large tracts can be bought at from $1 to $5. There is one fact true of our soil, and that is that when worn out and exhausted to all appearances, practical and scientific men say it can be easily restored—that it contains the elements of rapid recuperation.

Wheat does very well in East Tennessee. Our land when well cultivated will yield forty bushels to the acre in good seasons. The wheat is decidedly superior to Western wheat. It will weigh to the measured bushel sixty-six pounds, and often sixty-eight and seventy. A barrel of Tennessee flour will make twenty pounds more bread than a barrel of Illinois flour. It is much dryer, and will absorb more moisture. East Tennessee flour is quoted at two and three dollars per barrel more than the best Genesee New-York flour. Southern flour will bear transportation better than Western flour, and is sought after for foreign markets.

Corn is the great staple of East Tennessee. It is raised on bottom and upland with great success. Some of our river bottoms yield one hundred and five bushels to the acre. Most of the corn is fed to stock. Before the war it was no uncommon thing for some of our large planters to fatten five hundred head of hogs.

The Cumberland plateau and the eastern and southern counties bordering on the Smoky Mountains are peculiarly adapted to the culture of fruit—apples particularly.

Peaches grow here naturally, and are a very sure crop. Our railroads are hedged with peach-trees, grown from stones thrown out of the car windows by passengers. The dried peach crop of East Tennessee is yearly a source of great revenue.

Grasses of every kind do well. It is very generally supposed that they will not grow well in the South; but it is certainly not true of East Tennessee. Blue grass does well, and grows naturally in most of our counties. Clover flourishes, and most of our soil will yield one to two tons per acre.

I have thus given most of the facts upon the heads chosen that would be of interest. I cannot give satisfactory information upon all points in the brief space of a news letter. I know, however, that there is a growing interest and a demand for practical news upon such points pertaining to the South, and I propose to satisfy that demand as far as I can do so to the satisfaction of your readers. I know some of your contemporaries have been soliciting news from this section upon these subjects to meet the wants of their readers.

I would refer all persons desiring more detailed information to Mr. CHARLES SEYMOUR, the Corresponding Secretary, or J. W. NORTH, the President of the Knoxville Industrial Association. That body have in preparation a pamphlet which it is hoped will meet the wants of all interested.

There is a very gratifying increase in the number of Northern people prospecting in the South. I have never known such a wide-spread interest manifested in the future of East Tennessee, and it is to be hoped that the fondest anticipations of our people will be realized. OMEGA.

THE ALASKA PURCHASE.

The Testimony of Hon. Wm. H. Seward and Hon. Robert J. Walker Before the Congressional Investigating Committee.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Feb. 26.

The following is the testimony given by the Secretary of State and Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, before the Committee directed to investigate the rumors in regard to the Alaska purchase money.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 19, 1868.

TESTIMONY OF HON. WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

By the Chairman—Question—The Congress of the United States have directed the Committee on Public Expenditures to make inquiries touching the rumors afloat with reference to the Alaska purchase money. Have you any knowledge that you could properly give to the Committee on that subject?

Answer—The only knowledge I have concerning the payment of the Alaska purchase money is this: After the passage of the act of the last session of Congress appropriating the purchase money, I made a requisition, as Secretary of State, upon the Secretary of the Treasuay of the United States, which is filed in the Treasury Department, and of which the following is a copy:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, July 28, 1868.

To the Secretary of the Treasury:

NO. 4,317—SIR: Please cause a warrant for seven millions two hundred thousand dollars, payable in coin, to be issued in favor of Mr. EDWARD DE STOECKL, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of His Majesty the Emperor of Russia, pursuant to the convention between the United States and His Majesty of the 20th of March, 1867, and the act of Congress approved July 27, 1868, the said EDWARD DE STOECKL to be charged accordingly on the books of the Treasury. WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
$7,200,000. Secretary of State.

I also gave notice to the Russian Minister that the requisition had been made, and that he could call upon the Secretary of the Treasury for the money. I assume, upon general information, that that money was paid; I do not know when it was paid out of the Treasury, nor to whom it was paid.

Q.—Or of its distribution afterward?

A.—Nothing of its distribution; I know nothing whatever of the use the Russian Minister made of the fund; I know of no payment to anybody by him, or of any application of the funds which he received.

[The Chairman read to the witness the resolution of inquiry adopted by the House, on the motion of Mr. WOOD.]

Witness—In regard to all these allegations I have no knowledge. I thought the subject of the Alaska purchase a very good, proper and national achievement, and, therefore, out of the funds of the State Department I subscribed for a small number of the speeches delivered by Mr. CHARLES SUMNER, (which I have brought here,) to be used for the information of the public and of Congress. Various persons, some connected and others not connected with the Government, patriotic gentlemen, as I supposed, came to give me their cordial support and cooperation in the matter, and among the rest were Mr. SUMNER and Mr. WALKER. Whenever I found they were in possession of information or arguments which would be useful, such as documentary information, I received it and transmitted it to Congress, who had it published; all that I ever did, or that I ever expended, was in that way, and in no other, and no engagement was ever made with anybody for any part of the purchase money, or any other fund used in any way. My impression is that the whole expense and cost to the United States Government for the negotiation, payment and everything, did not exceed five hundred dollars. Among other persons who took an interest in the subject was Mr. ROBERT J. WALKER, with whom I have been in the habit of conferring very freely upon all public questions ever since I have been in office, and of whose patriotism, intelligence and industry I have a very high estimate; he proposed to me to support this measure, as it was called, and I accepted his good offices in that way, and encouraged him to proceed; he prepared a paper which he read to me before it was printed, and which I approved, and of which I subscribed for some copies of that. I do not know from Mr. WALKER that he was ever paid a cent; I never paid him a cent, but I remember hearing the Russian Minister speak in terms of thankfulness and appreciation of his efforts, and of his asking my opinion on the subject, and I have testimony to the efficiency of Mr. WALKER'S services, and of his labors in promoting the measure; that is all I know about Mr. WALKER. I do not know that he ever had $25,000; never heard from him that he was to have it, and I know nothing about it now.

Q.—Have you any knowledge of any money or presents, directly or indirectly, being made from the fund at the disposal of the Secretary of State, or any other fund, to subsidize or propitiate the Press or any person connected therewith, anywhere?

A.—On the contrary, I have knowledge that no fund at the State Department went to subsidize any Press anywhere, but when I found there was a certain hostile fire all along the line of the Press against the Alaska purchase and the purchase of St. John's and St. Thomas, and I read how valueless these possessions were by reason of perpetual icebergs in Alaska, and the universal cannonading of volcanoes and hurricanes down through the West Indies, I recalled to my recollection the attacks of the Federal Party upon Mr. JEFFERSON'S Administration for making the purchase of Louisiana; I was familiar with that literature in my boyhood, as you all probably were, and I sent a young man, Mr. DIXON, to New-York and Albany for the purpose of collecting from the Federal Press, remaining in the public libraries, extracts and articles attacking Mr. JEFFERSON in such papers; he collected and sent them to me; I paid his expenses in addition to his salary; I believe these articles were published through the Press so far as they would do it gratuitously, and in no other way; that is all I know of the influence upon the Press, as I said before, Mr. STOECKL expressed to me a grateful appreciation of the services of Mr. WALKER, which I thought was well deserved, and I bore testimony to it accordingly. I suppose your Committee is aware that there has been a litigation of some dimensions in New-Orleans, between the claimants and the Russian Government, and that the Russian Government had some arbitration on this and other claims involving legal questions. I have always supposed, when I heard this matter mentioned about Mr. WALKER, that as there were lawyers employed on the one side, the Russian Government might, for anything I know, have employed lawyers on the other side, as Governments sometimes do, and that the interest Mr. WALKER had taken in this question probably commended him to the Russian Government in that way, but I do not know anything of that.

Q.—Have you any other information or fact that you wish to state?

A.—I think of nothing further.

TESTIMONY OF HON. ROBERT J. WALKER.

Robert J. Walker sworn and examined.

By the Chairman—Question—Do you reside in the city?

Answer—I reside in the District with my family; I have an office as a lawyer in this city.

Q.—Were you the counsel of the Russian Legation in the Alaska matter?

A.—I mean to answer every question explicitly which the Committee shall ask me, but inasmuch as there is something very sacred in the confidential relation between a client and his counsel, and as the gentleman (Baron STOECKL, the Russian Minister,) who employed me in this matter is absent, I should like to have the opportunity of seeing him and obtaining his consent before giving my evidence. However, I feel perfectly confident that he would have consented, could I have seen him, and I feel it due to him and his Government, and to myself, that I should assume that he would consent, and therefore I deem it my duty under the circumstances to take the responsibility of divulging even confidential communications that have passed between us.

Q.—Proceed, if you please, in your own way, to state to the Committee your entire knowledge in regard to the matter of inquiry.

A.—With the consent of the Committee, I will state such knowledge as I have, in a narrative form, and my whole connection with the subject: Sometime in December, 1867, I think, I had a long and interesting conversation with the Secretary of State, Mr. SEWARD, on the subject of Alaska, St. Thomas and St. John's; I think the treaty for the purchase of Alaska had been ratified at that time. Mr. SEWARD seemed then to entertain no doubt about the success of the appropriation, but he entertained great doubt about the success of the treaty in relation to St. Thomas and St. John's. He had known me as a life-long annexationist, in favor of annexation in every quarter, North, South, East and West, and he showed me the treaty, and requested me to write an article in favor of it, communicating such facts as I thought would be of interest to the public, and would aid in making it successful. I wrote such an article, and I hold a pamphlet in my hand containing it, headed, "Letter of Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER on the purchase of Alaska, St. Thomas and St. John's," which I request may be made part of my testimony. This article appeared in the Morning Chronicle of this city, on the 28th of January, 1868. In that article there is very little said about Alaska (less than a page in all,) because it was thought there would be no difficulty about that, at that period. The pamphlet is chiefly devoted to the discussion of the acquisition of St. Thomas and St. John's, which I urged by all the arguments which occurred to me. At that time I had no idea of being employed by anybody in connection with Alaska or St. Thomas, or St. John's, and I never have been employed as counsel in relation to St. Thomas or St. John's. I printed this pamphlet at my own expense. Mr. SEWARD asked me to let him have a thousand copies of it; I told him I would send them to him, but insisted on paying for them myself, as I would not consent that anybody else should pay a dollar in connection with the pamphlet. I sent him a thousand copies and distributed, I think, about nine thousand copies myself. It will be seen, on reference to that pamphlet, that I have been the advocate of the acquisition of Alaska ever since the 3d of March, 1845. The pamphlet contains an extract from the official correspondence of that date between the late President POLK and myself, in which I urged him to acquire that territory. About three or four months after I had this conversation with Secretary SEWARD (I cannot recollect the exact date, but I think it was early in May, 1868,) I was called upon for the first time by Baron STOECKL, whom I had known intimately for many years. He said he wanted to have a confidential conversation with me, and we retired to a back room in my office. He then told me he desired to employ me as counsel for his Government in aid of the passage of the Alaska appropriation. I said I did not suppose there was any danger of the failure of the Appropriation bill; that, as the treaty had been ratified by the Senate with but two dissenting votes, I thought the defeat of the appropriation under those circumstances might involve serious consequences concerning our relations with Russia; and that I had no doubt of the success of the appropriation. That was my opinion at that date. Baron STOECKL said he thought there was a great disposition on the part of the House to economize and cut down the expenses of the Government at that particular session, and that he was fearful that if it was not defeated it would be postponed until the next session, and he thought that would most seriously disturb the existing cordial relations between Russia and the United States. Well, I told him I had never lobbied Congress in my life, and that I never meant to, and that if he wished me to lobby Congress generally I must decline. He said he had read with great care this pamphlet of mine on the subject of Alaska, St. Thomas and St. John's, and he was good enough to make some complimentary remarks which I suppose I need not repeat. He said his object was to get me to argue and discuss the question as I had done successfully many others, to print pamphlets and write articles for the newspapers presenting all the arguments in favor of the appropriation. He said he wished me also to confer with Mr. SUMNER and Gen. BANKS, who were warmly supporting the measure. I told him if that was all that was required of me, I could consider it entirely professional, and that I would do it. After some other conversation he proposed to pay me for such services as I have stated, the sum of $10,000, to which I assented. He said soon afterward he would voluntarily to increase that sum, as I shall presently state. I proceeded at once to discuss the question; I wrote a pamphlet on the subject, which was printed in the Intelligencer, and distributed very extensively by me; I also wrote articles for the National Intelligencer and Chronicle of this city, which were generally published editorially in both papers. These articles were modified somewhat in some minor particulars by those who had charge of the papers; I do not recollect exactly the modifications made, but I beg leave to say to the Committee, and hope I may be pardoned for saying it, that as much of those articles as chose to speak laudatorially of myself, I knew nothing about and never saw until I read them in the newspapers. I do not think I called upon a single member of Congress on the subject except Gen. BANKS. I called upon him because we had been intimate for a great many years. When I was Secretary of the Treasury, I appointed him an officer in the Custom-house in Boston, and my son, Gen. WALKER, had served under him some time in the Union army during the war. But I called upon him mainly because he was the great and able advocate of the measure. I think I called upon him about the time his report on the Alaska purchase came out, and that I asked him for a copy of the report. He did not have a copy of it at the time. I had read some extracts from it, however, and I expressed the pleasure I had in knowing that he supported the very measure upon which I felt so strongly, and which I regarded as of the highest importance to the country, particularly in connection with the acquisition of British Columbia, and the European Powers entirely off the Pacific Coast. He thoroughly agreed with me. I told him I was employed as counsel in the case, and asked him the situation of the bill, telling him that Baron STOECKL was very much alarmed, fearing that it would be either defeated or postponed until the next session. He told me the bill was in no danger at all, and that it would pass by a majority of more than two to one, he thought; but that at events, its passage was certain. I do not think I called upon any other member of Congress except Gen. BANKS, nor upon any Senator until within about two or three days of the final passage of the bill, when there arose a most serious difficulty, as you are all aware, about the powers of the House in relation to treaties ratified by the Senate. I was, and have been all my life, thoroughly of the opinion that the House was right; that they had full and complete power to withhold money appropriations in regard to treaties, and also in regard to any other matters, which, according to the Constitution, have to be submitted to them, although they could not participate in making treaties. I examined the authorities bearing on the subject, the debate in which Mr. MADISON participated, and the resolution passed, I think, in 1796, taking the same grounds and also some judicial decisions and precedents. When I called upon Mr. SUMNER there were several other persons in the room. I think Gov. BOUTWELL was there, or came in when we were discussing the matter. I called upon Mr. SUMNER because he was the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and because he had made the most learned, able, and, as I thought, most unanswerable argument in the Senate in favor of the treaty. My purpose was not to induce him to vote for the appropriation, but to inquire as to the probable effect of this difference between the Senate and the House in relation to this matter. I think, however, before we came upon that subject Mr. SUMNER asked me about the Funding bill known as "SHERMAN'S Funding bill." I told him that if it were possible to settle that question by a Funding bill in which it should be left to the voluntary choice of the public creditors to take a bond at par, after paying the $5,000 in greenbacks to Mr. STANTON, I had remaing $21,000 in gold and about $2,300 in greenbacks, which I retained, on the request of Baron STOECKL, as an additional fee. This was all that I was paid at the time, and I never received any more myself. But I told Baron STOECKL that the Chronicle newspaper had rendered such important services on this question, beginning with January, 1868, and that, too, without any promise or expectation of reward, (for I had never intimated such a thing to anybody connected with it,) that I thought he ought to pay them $3,000 in gold. I said that we had occupied a great deal of space in their paper, and that they had advocated the measure with great ability. he assented to the proposition very cheerfully; This occurred sometime after I received the $26,000. I then called upon Col. FORNEY and stated to him that I had never mentioned the subject of pay to him for his services in this connection, and knew very well that he did not expect any, but that I thought his services had been of great value to us, and that in devoting so much space in his paper to it, he must have disbursed other articles which would otherwise have been printed, and in consideration of these facts I had taken the responsibility of advising Baron STOECKL to pay him $3,000 in gold. He expressed very great gratitude to me, and said he had a perfect right to receive it, holding now no office; that he would not have had the right to have had any pecuniary promise before-hand as an inducement to support the measure on the Press, but that he thought he had both a legal and moral right to receive money tendered to him afterward; that his position in connection with public affairs, was of such importance in his own opinion, that although he had a perfect right to receive it, he had rather not. What I am now stating occurred some weeks after the passage of the bill. I communicated this conversation to Baron STOECKL, and told him I thought it was wrong to occupy such a vast deal of their time and their paper without compensating them for it; that they had rendered most valuable services, and I would propose, with his consent, to pay this amount to Mr. D. C. FORNEY, which I accordingly did; it was converted into greenbacks—I forget how much it made, or what the premium was—and paid to Mr. D. C. FORNEY. I never paid a dollar or offered to pay a dollar for any other human being connected with the Press, and I never promised, offered or suggested in any way, directly or indirectly, to Col. FORNEY, D. C. FORNEY or anybody else connected with that paper, that they should have any money until they were first informed after passage of the bill.

Q.—Do you know whether any other person made any such promise?

A.—I do not, and I do not believe that one dollar of that Russian purchase money was paid directly or indirectly to any member of either House of Congress, or to any one connected with the Press, except as I have just stated; I am perfectly confident that no such promise could have been made without my knowing it, because the matter originated entirely with myself, and took place after the passage of the bill.

Q.—You say that of this Russian purchase money I do you say it likewise of the proceeds thereof?

A.—I mean to say that neither directly or indirectly, without reservation, was one cent of money, whether Russian American or any other, ever paid, or ever agreed to be paid, by me to any human being in this connection, except as I have stated.

Q.—Given or presented?

A.—No; neither given nor presented to them, or to any one for them, or connected in any way with them.

Q.—Nor by anybody else to your knowledge?

A.—Nor by anybody else with my knowledge or belief; I do not believe that any other money was paid.

By Mr. Broomall—Q.—Do you mean to say that all the rest of that appropriation went to the Russian Government?

A.—I really do not know what Baron STOECKL did with the rest of it, except that he complained to me that the whole thing had been very expensive. He complained particularly about the telegraphs to and from Russia, and other charges which he said were enormous, but I do not think he paid or offered to pay one dollar to any member of either House of Congress, or to anybody connected with the Press.

By Mr. Bromwell—Q.—I would like to ask you if these publications of which you speak were written by you, ostensibly as counsel for the Russian Legation, or as Mr. WALKER?

A.—I did not sign my name to them.

Q.—Did they go out, and was it the understanding of the Russian Legation that they should go out with the weight of your name and character?

A.—I will tell the Committee exactly what the fact was, at the risk of being considered egotistical. I think the Russian Minister desired, as he said, to have my arguments, which he was good enough to say had carried many public measures, and that he still thought Congress and the American people amenable to truth and reason.

Q.—Were they published as yours or otherwise?

A.—They were not published as mine, though a great many people knew I wrote them, and this was announced in the debate on the floor; I never concealed my employment as counsel.

Q.—Were they distributed among the members of Congress?

A.—They were.

By Mr. Peters—Q.—Was not the first article published in the Chronicle over your signature?

A.—It was; at that time I was not the counsel of the Russian Legation, and never expected to be.

By Mr. Broomall—Q.—Did any of those published after you were made counsel appear over your own name?

A.—I think none of them.

By Mr. Bromwell—Q.—Were they given in the Press as from you?

A.—I think not.

Q.—You spoke of editors speaking very flatteringly of you?

A.—I do not think any of the editors referred to me as the author of these articles; but as I happened to possess the lifelong friendship of Col. FORNEY, and also as Mr. ALLEN, editor of the Intelligencer was a good friend of mine, they said a great many pleasant things about me; I only made the remark that if there were any of the editorials that spoke of me in a complimentary way, I wished the Committee to know that they were not of my composition; in other words, I wished to exclude that class of articles from the publications written by me.

By Mr. Peters—Q.—I understand you to say that besides the sums you have stated, you know of no other use made of that appropriation of money in any direction.

A.—I know of no use made of any other portion of the money for any purpose whatever; I have no knowledge whatever of any such use.

Q.—Have you information not amounting to knowledge?

A.—I have no information directly or indirectly, reliable or unreliable, as to what became of the rest of the money.

By Mr. Broomall—Q.—Have you any reason to suspect that any of it was paid to any officer in any department of the Government?

A.—I have no reason to suspect it; it is my profound conviction that not a dollar of it was paid to anybody in connection with the Government in any capacity, either from that or any other fund whatever.

SUDDEN DEATH.

An Educated and Once Influential Man Drops Dead in the Street—Evidences of Poverty and Suffering.

From the Chicago Post, Feb. 24.

About 9 o'clock this morning a man, apparently about 60 years old, while passing the City Hotel, dropped suddenly to the sidewalk, powerless. He was raised and carried into the hotel, and a physician called, but it was found that the apparent swoon was in reality death. He was poorly clad, and had no money about him, excepting a few cents. Evidences of poverty, suffering and friendless were apparent in his pale and face. On his body were numerous papers and letters, which show him to have been a man of education and influence. A letter to Hon. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, at Quincy, Mass., is signed "PETER SINCLAIR, of Scotland, formerly Agent and Secretary of the Union and Emancipation Society, No. 61 Cheadle, Manchester." The letters contain the same name, either in signature, address, or in an introductory way. It also seems that he was the prime mover in the formation of the Society during the early part of the war, in opposition to the societies hostile to our cause and favoring the rebellion. The papers also attest that he was an agent for the systematic emigration of skilled laborers, farmers, manufacturers, machinists, &c., from Great Britain to this country. In one of his letters he speaks approvingly of an order of the person addressed, on the subject of the introduction of capital and labor into the South, and refers to his own failure to consummate such an end, just previous to the close of the war, owing to the apathy of the Southern people themselves. Other letters dated at various points of England speak of him as the late secretary of the Society of the Friends of Emancipation in Great Britain, and as being an ardent and active friend to the Union in its struggle to maintain a free and popular Government, against the efforts of a slaveholding power to crush it.

Letters from Gov. ANDREW, and Gov. BULLOCK, of Massachusetts, and from provincial business and manufacturing men, both in this country and Great Britain; passes over the Central Pacific and other roads, in California and the East, and letters of introduction are also among his effects. The address of Mr. VAN NOSTRAND, of Elgin, Ill., was found among them. Some of the letters speak of his faithfully and successfully fulfilling contracts for the furnishing of "educated labor" from Great Britain.

An inquest had resulted in the verdict of death from heart disease. The body has been sent to the Dead-house, where it will remain for a few days for identification.

The unfortunate man, whether he be the one whose name appears in the letters or not, must have undergone great destitution and misery, and was unmistakably reduced to the last extremities. His body was alive with vermin, and his unclean condition show him to have been sadly lacking opportunity to preserve his health and cleanliness. His case is peculiarly sad, falling, as he did, from so prosperous a state to such depths of misery. Some of his letters bore dates as late as the present month.

POLICE COURTS.

THE TOMBS—HOGAN, JUSTICE.

LARCENY OF A VIOLIN.

Officer MUSGRAVE, of the Fourth Precinct, arrested MICHAEL MCKEEVER on Saturday, on a charge of having stolen a violin, the property of DENNIS O'BRIEN, of No. 55 New Chambers-street, some months ago. As SARAH MARTIN, an inmate of O'BRIEN'S house, testified before the Magistrate that she saw the larceny committed, the prisoner was held for trial.

JEFFERSON MARKET—LEDWITH, JUSTICE.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT.

Officer MICHAEL YAGER, of the Eighteenth Precinct, appeared before the Magistrate yesterday and entered a complaint of felonious assault against one JAMES REILLY, whom he had arrested. It appears that at an early hour yesterday the officer saw GEORGE MAGEE, PATRICK MOKELEN and the prisoner come out of a saloon on the corner of Sixteenth-street and First-avenue, and engage in a quarrel. Before the officer could interfere, he heard MAGEE exclaim "I'm stabbed," and he subsequently ascertained that MAGEE had been stabbed in the body near the stomach. As the wounded man had been taken to Bellevue Hospital and reported to be in a critical condition, the Magistrate held the prisoner to await the result of the injuries.

ESSEX MARKET—MANSFIELD, JUSTICE.

A BOGUS CHECK.

AUGUST SCHMIDT, a fancy goods dealer at No. 81 Grand-street, sold $20 worth of goods to one SIGISMUND HERZOG alias Herzeman, a peddler, on the 22d of May, 1868, and received in payment therefor a check on the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank, signed S. Herzeman. As the check proved to be worthless, HERZOG was arrested on the first opportunity, which occurred yesterday, and on his being arraigned before the Magistrate, he was held for trial. The prisoner stated that he was innocent of the fraudulent intent, and claimed simply to have made a mistake and signed the wrong name to the check.

The Bank movement in its Currency Departments is quite steady. In its Specie Deposits the falling off is due to the Customs payments of the week. Of the $1,093,967 Gold and Silver of all descriptions exported for the week, $881,546 was in Spanish Doubloons, recently imported from Europe for the Cuba market. During the present week the Banks will probably receive nearly as much Gold from the Treasury for the millions of dollars and rapidly accumulating from the Customs revenue, will be faithfully applied, as it long since should have been applied, (under the neglected Sinking Fund Act of Feb. 25, 1862,) to the reduction of the principal of the Gold-bearing Funded Debt, by the exchange of this Gold for United States Bonds and Registered Stock, in open market, or on sealed proposals, at the best difference this exchange will command, after due advertisement of the amounts to be sold or awarded. But it is nevertheless to be desired that the Hooper bill should be passed, not only to strengthen the new administration in these purposes and to this great end, but to set at rest all doubt, at home and abroad, the question of closing up the Funded Gold-bearing Debt, and the agitation of all impracticable or threatening schemes for refunding and reducing the Interest on this Debt, until the Public Credit is raised to a standard equal to the easy or voluntary conversion of 5-20s, as they fall within the time or Government option of redemption at par in Gold, for a five (or it may be a four) ₱ cent. Stock.

The Import Entries for the past week, including the Dry Goods return in our last paper, amount to $4,763,501, against the total entries of $5,711,098 same week last year. The Export Clearances of Domestic Produce amount to $3,261,173, against $2,968,819 same week last year. The export of Specie amounts to $1,093,967, against $569,901 same week last year. The Customs of the week are $3,645,966. The receipts of Cotton, coastwise and by railroad, are 21,463 bales. The number of emigrant passengers arrived during the week, 1,684.

The increase of Gold Customs, thus far in the Fiscal year—eight months—at all the Collection ports of the United States, is now about Ten and a half millions. For the whole Fiscal Year, 1868, they were $164,492,000; so that without further increase from the present date to June 30, the Fiscal Year, 1869, will yield about $175,000,000. But as the prospects of our Foreign Trade now look, we believe the amount will exceed One Hundred and Eighty Millions, while the Interest upon the Gold-bearing Debt for the year is only $124,255,092—leaving as applicable to sinking the Principal of this Debt, about $56,000,000, exclusive of the surplus Gold from previous years, not otherwise sold or disposed of.

There was increased excitement in the Public Funds Saturday A. M., and a further rise on the advanced prices of Friday of full 1@1⅛ ₱ cent., stimulated by the London Cable dispatches and the tenor of private advices from England and the Continent as to the real extent and nature of the fresh demand for and confidence in our Government Stocks. Later in the day the Cable telegrams were about 1 ₱ cent. lower than the extreme price paid in the morning for the 5-20s of 1862 in London, and upon these quotations the market here, not only for the '62s, but for other 5-20s, became quite unsettled, and the fluctuations were from 118½, the highest for 1862s in the morning, down to 117, and subsequently up again to 117⅞ ₱ cent. The 1867s from 113½ to 112⅝ ₱ cent., and other descriptions in about the same proportion. At the close of the day the market was again inclined upward, and the last prices were ½@¾ ₱ cent. over the advance of Friday.

The Gold Room broke down to 130⅛ in the morning, but on the reaction in 5-20s in London, about 2 o'clock recovered to 131⅞@131⅝ ₱ cent. The Foreign Exchanges were done as low as 108¼@108½ for 60 days on London in the forenoon, closing 108⅝@108¾ ₱ cent. Short sight sold 108⅝@¾@109, and Cable transfers were made early in the day at 109@108¾ ₱ cent.

In other departments of the Stock Exchange than the Public Funds, the Railway speculation was generally firm in prices, though the chief activity in speculation was confined to New-York Central and one or two of the Western Roads. New-York Central was dealt in after the closing of the transfers for the 15th March Dividend, at 2 o'clock P. M., ex 4 ₱ cent. cash Dividend, the Interest Scrip to accompany the Stock in its original shape, subject to its future disposition as to Dividend or change of form.

A correspondent writes of the progress and prospects of the St. Louis and Iron Mountain Road:

"There has been increased activity in St. Louis and Iron Mountain Bonds in consequence of the growing business on the old road, which has nearly doubled in a year. You may learn that the extension will be opened about June 1. The St. Louis merchants are pleased in the prospect of direct communication with Mobile and New-Orleans. The shares of this road, which were 35 last month, have been sold at from 40 to 50 within a few days."

Messrs. JOHN BINGHAM & Co., in their Liverpool circular of Feb. 12, remark:

"The country grain markets have been tolerably steady this week. There are now on the coast for sale 32 cargoes Wheat and 21 cargoes of Maize, and the following are the sales, C. F. & I., reported since our last: Wheat—Arrived: 2 cargoes New Coast at Taganrog at 48s. 3d. @ 50s. ₱ 492 lbs.; 4 cargoes Ghirka @ Taganrog at 46s. 9d. @ 47s. 6d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 2 cargoes Ghirka @ Odessa at 48s. 3d. @ 48s. 6d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 2 cargoes Ghirka @ Sulina at 50s. @ 50s. 6d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 1 cargo Ghirka @ Ibrail at 49s. ₱ 492 lbs.; 1 cargo Ghirka @ Nicolaieff at 48s. 6d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 1 cargo New Rostoff Ghirka @ Taganrog at 50s. 3d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 1 cargo Ghirka @ Marianopoli at 50s. 6d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 4 cargoes Rubanovski Marianopoli at 49s. 3d. @ 50s. 9d. ₱ 492 lbs.; 1 cargo Berdianski @ Berdianski at 49s. ₱ 492 lbs.; 2 cargoes Saxonian @ Galatz at 49s. ₱ 492 lbs.; 1 cargo Winter Yeisk @ Yeisk at 46s. 9d. ₱ 492 lbs. At our last Tuesday's market Wheat and Flour were steady at former prices. Indian Corn—Rated brought 6d. to 9d. ₱ quarter advance, but other sorts were unaltered in value. Oats and Oatmeal slow of sale at previous prices. Beans and Pease were the turn easier.

At our Corn Exchange to-day, Wheat and Flour, with a moderate consumptive demand, were unaltered in value. Indian Corn met more attention at a reduction of 6d. ₱ quarter on Mediterranean, and about former prices for other sorts. Beans and Pease were 6d. to 9d. ₱ quarter cheaper, and slow of sale. Oats and Oatmeal were in limited request, and again the turn lower."

The aggregate amount of Imports (other than Dry Goods and Specie) at the port of New-York from foreign ports, for the week ending Feb. 26, 1869, was $2,902,075.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY'S BONDS are a first mortgage upon one of the longest lines of railroad in the world. The amount will be less than $27,000 per mile. The earnings from local business over a portion of the road last year were over five million dollars, and after its completion early this season, the immense through traffic of the Pacific States will increase this sum to fifteen or twenty millions. The payment of both interest and principal of the bonds in gold is, therefore, perfectly sure.

The present high price of Governments offers a favorable opportunity to sell and to reinvest in a bond equally safe and more valuable on account of the longer period before its maturity. The exchange will now pay a profit of from ten to fifteen per cent. As the issue of these bonds will soon cease, parties who desire to invest are invited to make their subscriptions at once. They will be received at the Company's office, No. 20 Nassau-street, and by JOHN J. CISCO & SON, No. 59 Wall-street, and by banks and bankers generally. A pamphlet, with full particulars, sent free on application.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

M. RAYMOND THEODORE TROPLONG, the President of the French Senate, died on Saturday.

It is reported that the present Spanish Minister to England will proceed to this country to settle any difficulty which may arise from the Cuban insurrection.

At Barcelona, last week, there was an attempted insurrection. The authorities have arrested about forty persons.

CUBA.

It is reported that the Cuban insurgents have cut the aqueduct at Santiago de Cuba. The troops under Gen. LESCA are expected to have an engagement with the rebels near Magarabomba. Gen. PUELLO has arrived with reinforcements at Cienfuegos, and has made three divisions of the regular army. At Caloma de St. Domingo, a battle took place, in which many on both sides were killed. The result is not known. A fight occurred near Guanaja, in which the regulars were victorious. The emigration of Cubans is undiminished, every steamer bearing away hundreds in search of new homes. Additional supplies of troops are needed, as the number at present can do no more than hold their own. Thousands from the country are seeking refuge in the cities.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, Saturday, after the presentation of a few bills, reports, &c., the Public Credit bill was taken up and a discussion ensued, occupying the entire afternoon. In the evening session, Mr. WILSON introduced a bill for the more equal distribution of national banking capital. Mr. SHERMAN offered a resolution providing for the recognition of the independence of Cuba. The bill incorporating the Masonic Mutual Relief Association was passed. The joint resolution donating cannon for the monument of Gen. MCPHERSON was passed, after which the Public Credit bill was resumed, and at 11:45 the bill as amended passed.

In the House the contested election cases of Messrs. HUNT and MENARD were the subject of a long discussion, and both gentlemen were refused seats. Mr. MENARD is a colored man, and was allowed to speak in his own behalf, the first instance of a colored man addressing either House of Congress. His remarks were listened to with great interest. The evening session was occupied in discussing the Indian Appropriation bill.

GENERAL.

Cattle stealing has lately been quite as flourishing a trade in the Indian Territory as it was in Kansas during the war. Three white men were recently implicated in having influenced the Caddoe Indians to steal 450 head of cattle belonging to citizens of Texas, which cattle they afterward bought for about $5 per head in goods. Two hundred of these cattle were issued to the Indians by one of the men, who was an Indian agent, and for the payment of which claims are now being pushed at Washington. The balance, about 250 head, were sent to Camp Supply, to be sold to the United States Government contractor. Gen. SHERIDAN has banished these cattle speculators from the Indian Territory, and ordered the seizure of all the cattle stolen by them.

Mr. CHOATE, who was arrested at St. Paul, Minn., on the charge of being the Newburyport "fire bug," was brought to that city Friday night and committed to jail. He will be examined today.

It is reported that of the seventeen members of the Massachusetts Legislative Committee on the License law, seven, and perhaps nine, will report in favor of restoring the Prohibitory law, with a modification in reference to State and town agents. Others will report in favor of permiting the sale of cider and other weaker liquors.

A gentleman named IRA H. PIERCE, formerly City Attorney of Titusville, Penn., was recently arrested in Missouri and brought to Titusville, charged with being engaged in the great Benninghoff robbery that took place there some time since. There was not the slightest particle of evidence against Mr. PIERCE, and he was forthwith discharged, his arrest having been caused by the malice of one of the robbers, who is now in jail. Mr. PIERCE has now commenced suit against the BENNINGHOFFS' for false arrest, laying damages at $25,000. Several other persons, who were similarly arrested, have also commenced suits for damages.

The schooner Wide Awake arrived at this port yesterday. She reports that on Feb. 19, when off Sand Key, she was hove to during the night by a Spanish man-of-war, who sent an officer on board to examine the papers. The officers stated that they were on the lookout for a small steamer, said to be engaged in carrying arms to the Cuban insurgents from some of the Southern ports.

Rochester, N. Y., will elect city officers tomorrow. The rival candidates for Mayor are EDWARD M. SMITH, Republican, and DANIEL WARNER, Democrat. The municipal election at Burlington, Vt., will also take place to-morrow.

Gen. SHERIDAN recently issued an order banishing beyond the limits of the Indian Territory a trader known as "Dutch Bill," for having furnished powder, lead and food to Indians engaged in murdering the frontier settlers of Kansas, Texas and Colorado. FRED. JONES, a horse-thief, was similarly banished, and his arrest ordered if he could be found. Gen. GETTY is instructed to make every effort to break up and punish the bands of New-Mexican traders who have been and are still trading for captured stock with hostile Indians; and if such traders are found at any point east of the eastern line of New-Mexico, their goods will be burned and their stock killed.

The Judiciary Committee of the Tennessee Senate has reported against the proposition to sell the Hermitage, formerly the residence of Gen. JACKSON, but now the property of the State. The Committee recommends that Tennessee should keep the estate for all time to come, and make it, on some favorable occasion, the site of some noble institution of education or of benevolence. Ashland, Ky., formerly the home of HENRY CLAY, is now the site of a university, which is attended by over six hundred students from all parts of the Union.

On Friday morning the steam boiler in a sash factory at Salem, Ohio, exploded, entirely demolishing the building, the ruins of which immediately took fire and burned rapidly. There were half a dozen or more men in the building at the time, three of whom were buried in the ruins. One was instantly killed and the others were severely injured.

The United States Supreme Court has denied the petition for a habeas corpus in the cases of ARNOLD and SPANGLER.

At a meeting in Mansfield, Mass., on Saturday, Mr. MENGIS made a speech advocating the suffrage of young men of 18 years of age. His speech was listened to with interest, and a vote of thanks was tendered to the speaker.

The Cincinnati City Council has resolved to purchase the gas works of that city. They will take possession in January next.

Information has been received at Gen. SHERMAN'S headquarters in St. Louis to the effect that LITTLE RAVEN and his band of three hundred Sioux have surrendered to Gen. CUSTER.

There are in Oregon twenty-one quartz mills, supplied with one hundred and forty stamps and a large number of arastras, the cost of the whole having been about $160,000. The extent of water ditching reaches one hundred and sixty-five miles—cost, $275,000. About one-half of the quartz mills are driven by water, being a larger proportion than in California or any other portion of the Pacific coast.

Gen. N. B. FORREST has given away the stock which he held in the Memphis Association Course, and says that for the future he does not propose to take any active part in matters belonging to the turf.

One JOSEPH A. ROSE has sued a young lady in Baltimore for $10,000 damages, alleging that she promised to change her name to ROSE, and now doth refuse to do the same.

Judge LAUCK, of Tennessee, last week held court in Jackson County, and reports an orderly condition of affairs there. This is one of the counties in which martial law has been proclaimed. Judge LAUCK is a Republican, but encountered no opposition to his holding court from the residents of the county.

A difficulty occurred on the night of Feb. 22 at Jacksonville, Ga., between some colored people and some white soldiers, during which a negro was killed and white soldier wounded. The soldiers turned out to the rescue of their comrades, and a general melée ensued. About two hundred shots were fired. A number of balls entered private residences and wounded citizens, while some were also wounded while in the street.

The Tallahassee Floridian says that several of the most valuable tracts of land in Leon County, Fla., were sold by the United States Marshal recently, under execution, at the Courthouse, in Tallahassee, none of which brought more than a dollar per acre in currency. For one of these tracts $27 per acre in gold was offered a little before the war.

President JOHNSON is expected to arrive at his home, Greenville, Tenn., about the 12th inst., when a grand reception is to be given him by the residents of that vicinity.

We print in another column Haytian intelligence, from Port-au-Prince, dated Feb. 17. It contains particulars of concessions made to France with a view to the payment of the French debt, and also new and important blockade regulations. The situation of affairs was well nigh unchanged. SALNAVE was before Aux Cayes, but that place had not fallen into his power.

The obsequies of the late DAVID T. VALENTINE took place at the Tabernacle Baptist Church, Second-avenue, yesterday. A large congregation, including officials of the City Government, was present. Three ministers assisted in the services. The funeral discourse was preached by Rev. J. RYLAND KENDRICK. The remains were interred in Green-Wood.

A special sermon to the Police Force was delivered last evening at Grace Chapel by Rev. WALTER DELAFIELD.

A fire occurred in the building No. 29 Beekman-street yesterday afternoon, doing damage to the amount of $60,000.

Congressional Status of Louisiana and Georgia.

The Tribune, the other day, in its Washington correspondence, announced as a fixed fact, "That the Clerk will not call the names of the Representatives from the States of Georgia and Louisiana on the assembling of the next Congress."

That this purpose has been entertained, so far as Georgia is concerned, and that the object to be effected is the retention of a full two-thirds majority in the new House, are matters which do not admit of doubt. The intimation to which we refer was not confined to the Tribune's columns; and its publication was evidently intended to pave the way for a promised resolution of the Reconstruction Committee in favor of the expulsion of the present Georgia members. The pretext for that proceeding, as well as for the omission of the other names from the roll of the new Congress, was of course the alleged violation by the local Legislature of the conditions of restoration.

Later dispatches encourage the hope that the influence of Gen. GRANT has sufficed to prevent the contemplated outrage. The Reconstruction Committee, we are told, has for the present dropped its intention to reopen the question in Georgia by recommending the expulsion of its Representatives. This decision, we trust, will be adhered to. For all the purposes of the law, Reconstruction has been completed in Georgia. Its Representatives have occupied seats in the expiring Congress, with their title unchallenged; they have participated in its proceedings, and shared all the privileges of the members around them. The vote of the State in the Presidential election has been counted; and in all essential respects its standing in the Capitol is as good as that of Massachusetts or New-York. To expel its members now, with the record as it is, would be a flagrant act of usurpation. To direct the Clerk not to call the names of those whom it sends to the new Congress, on the ground assigned by those who urge the step, would be morally and constitutionally not one whit better.

Our own correspondent yesterday stated that the Georgia names will be omitted from the roll on Thursday next, "because there are no credentials here, and there is a question as to whether they have ever been legally elected." The former of these reasons, if nothing occur to change it, will necessitate the omission: the Clerk cannot call names of which he has not been officially advised. But neither he nor the present House has a right to raise a question affecting the validity of the State election. The bearers of credentials have a prima facie title to seats; whether they may be unseated and their places assigned to others, is a question for the next House to determine, after proper scrutiny, by the Election Committee. A right nowhere exists, in the meantime, to refuse recognition to members elect because the advocates of extreme measures, for purposes of their own, impugn the legality of the election. Upon that point, the Republican Party in Georgia is divided; and the section which favors the acceptance, by Congress, of things as they are, seems to us more powerful, and more entitled to consideration than that which recommends the violent measures which, until Saturday, the Reconstruction Committee was disposed to press upon the House.

The same policy which, as upheld by Gen. GRANT, has prevailed even in Mr. BOUTWELL'S mind, points to the inclusion of the Georgia members in the roll to be called on the Fourth. It is just as important, just as expedient, to recognize Georgia then—if the credentials of its Representatives be in the hands of the Clerk—as it is now to leave undisturbed the title of the present members.

And why should Louisiana be excluded? The moral completeness of its reconstruction may be less obvious than that of South Carolina or Alabama, but in a legal aspect it is quite as perfect. No proposal has been made in its case to upset reconstruction and begin anew. Its standing in the Union is unassailed and unassailable. It is true that charges of fraud and violence have been preferred affecting the seats of some who will claim admission as its Representatives. It is, moreover, not improbable that formal investigation may reveal sufficient to vitiate their election. These, however, are points to be considered by the next House. No party caucus, no Committee now in existence has any excuse for passing judgment on ex parte information in a manner unknown to the Constitution and the law. Least of all may the Clerk, with any shadow of reason or law, usurp the functions of the House or the Election Committee, and rule out members who can be properly unseated only in one way.

The proceeding, whether in regard to Georgia or Louisiana, would be greatly aggravated by its transparent partisan tendency. From any point of view, the proposition is bad enough. But to exclude the States named, or either of them, from the new Congress pending the settlement of grave and delicate questions, would be both indiscreet and unjust. We shall be glad to find the good sense and proper feeling which have induced Mr. BOUTWELL to abandon one feature of the programme attributed to him, prevailing over the rash counsels which, while unsettling the South and alarming the country, would be permanently injurious to the party they are designed to serve.

The decision of Judge BLATCHFORD in the case of the Scotia, a note of which will be found in another column, is one of the most important decisions in collison cases which has been rendered in the Courts. The amount involved ($400,000) is enough to give the case importance. But while the amount concerns only the parties, the principle involved in the decision is of importance to all who navigate the ocean.

The suit was brought against the steamer Scotia, of the Cunard line, to recover for the loss of the ship Berkshire, which was sunk by a collision with the Scotia in mid-ocean, in April, 1867. The Berkshire at the time was not equipped with the regulation lights as required by our statute, but had a single white light hung at her anchor-stock on her starboard bow. For the Scotia it was claimed that the Berkshire was bound to carry the lights which the United States statute requires, and that the Scotia had a right to suppose that she was doing so, and inasmuch as the statute prescribed a white light for steamers, and not for sailing vessels, the Scotia had the right to assume that the vessel was a steamer and act accordingly, which she did. But the Berkshire, on the other hand, claimed that that statute was not binding upon an American vessel when meeting a foreign vessel. The important question, therefore, in the case was, what is the law by which ships of different nations are to be governed when they meet on the high seas.

Judge BLATCHFORD, in his opinion, examines the English authorities on this question. He concludes that the Courts of England would not hold the English statute binding upon an English ship meeting a ship of another nation, even though that other nation had adopted the same regulations for its ships, unless by the British statute they were required to treat the ships of such nation as British vessels. And on this point his decision seems to be supported by the weight of authorities, though there is one case, certainly, to which no reference is made in the opinion, which holds the contrary doctrine. (The Cleadon, 1 Lushington, p. 160.)

From this point it follows that, inasmuch as there is nothing in our statutes which requires our Courts to treat as American vessels the vessels of all nations which have adopted regulations similar to ours, our Courts would not be called upon to treat the Scotia as an American vessel, to be governed by the American statute, and, inasmuch as that statute would not be binding on the English vessel, it should not, according to the rules adopted by the English Courts, be held binding upon either vessel.

This being so, the vessels must, of course, be bound by the law of the sea, and the question arose at once what was that law. Here is the important point of the decision. Taking the definition of the law of the sea, that it is those rules and usages generally known and customarily observed by the vessels of the various nations navigating those seas, the Judge finds that similar rules in regard to the lights and navigation of vessels at sea have been adopted by the United States, Great Britain, France, Spain, Prussia, Russia, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, Belgium and Holland, and other maritime nations, and he, therefore, holds that those rules have become the law of the sea, and are to be enforced by Courts of Admiralty, not as the statutory law of this nation or that, but as the general law of the sea, which is binding upon all the vessels which navigate it.

This view is a new one; but it strikes us as eminently reasonable. Certainly if the Codes of the Rhodians, and of Oleron, and of Wisbuy were taken to declare the law of the sea, there is no reason why a Code which is agreed upon by all the great maritime nations of the present day, should not be held to be of equal binding force and extent. We shall expect to see the Courts of the other maritime nations adopt this view, and, by adopting it, they will be saved from the consideration of perplexing questions as to the effect of statute laws.

The Pollard Murder.

It seems that out of several hundred citizens called on in Richmond, Va., to try GRANT, indicted for the murder of POLLARD, only two were found who had not formed an opinion. Whether the opinions all the rest had formed, were such as ought to have disqualified them from acting as jurors, we are not informed: but they seem to have had that effect, as the Sheriff has gone into adjoining towns to find enough men who have not formed opinions, to form a jury.

We have seen as yet no direct proof of the fact that GRANT did shoot POLLARD in the manner alleged. That fact remains to be established by evidence. If it is established, it will remain for the defendant to show that the killing was not murder, but was justified or its guilt mitigated by the fact that POLLARD had made an unpleasant publication about GRANT'S sister. We presume the difficulty in getting a jury is due to the fact that nearly all the citizens of Richmond justify the killing on that ground. If so, the fact is not creditable to Richmond as a city pretending to be governed by law, and generally supposed to belong to a civilized, rather than a half-civilized or barbarous state of society.

The distinctive feature of a civilized community is that it is governed by law;—that of a savage state is that it knows nothing of law, but is governed by the private passions of its individual members. Crimes are committed in both, of very much the same character and involving the same results. But in civilized communities they are punished by the State, as offences against the general good, and by laws made for the common safety and applicable to all alike; whereas in a savage state, each person takes the redress of his own wrongs into his own hands and inflicts upon the offender such penalties as his own passions may prompt.

That individuals should do this in every community is inevitable; for there will be individual savages in every community, no matter how highly cultivated the mass of its people may be. But when such acts are perpetrated, and are approved and justified by the whole community, the inference is irresistible that the whole community is losing the distinctive characteristics of civilized society, and is falling into the habits and passions of the savage state.

This Grant business is likely to test the character of the City of Richmond in this respect. That POLLARD acted in a very disreputable and unprincipled manner,—that GRANT should have been very indignant about it, and that POLLARD should have incurred the resentment and forfeited the respect of the community by his conduct, is very natural and proper. And if GRANT had inflicted upon him personal chastisement, or affixed to his name and person some disgraceful and indelible brand, by way of penalty for an offence not properly provided for by law, he would not have violated essential justice or have incurred the serious censure of upright men. But when he deliberately kills him,—in a stealthy and cowardly way, he outrages every man's sense of justice and perpetrates as great a wrong on society at large as on his victim. And unless the community is utterly dead to the sense of justice, or under the control of the savages who live in it and make their own passions its law, it will take care that this wrong is redressed.

Richmond probably did not lose very much in losing POLLARD. But unless it punishes his assassin, the lives of the most worthy and valuable of its citizens are at the mercy of the outlaws who recognize no law but their own selfish passions.

The Cruelties of Lopez.

The wholesale cruelties attributed to LOPEZ in the late tidings from Paraguay, are almost too horrible to be believed. Exaggerated they doubtless are; yet a great number of slaughters, alike of prisoners and of Paraguayans, is substantiated by the testimony not only of the Allies, but of Americans, Italians, Germans and other neutrals who witnessed the evidence of the atrocities.

Conduct so infamous alienates from Marshal LOPEZ that admiration which his stubborn valor and patriotism inspire. No rage, no despair can justify cruelty, or excuse violation of the laws of war. To wreak vengeance on one's captives is the mark of savage warfare, not of the "religion, humanity and civilization" in whose cause the Paraguayan President claims to fight. When the Dictator declares he will offer another "holocaust to the blood already generously shed," and will "fight until God and the valor of our arms decide our cause," a sentiment of sympathy is stirred for him; but when that "holocaust" of victims turns out to be one of captives, sympathy turns to disgust.

The Brazilian and Argentine papers are crowded both with documentary and reported evidence of the Marshal President's outrages on the eve of flight. He had, it is said, a large number of prisoners taken out at Asuncion and summarily shot, lest they should be released by the enemy. Among these were his own brothers, BENIGNO and VENANCIO, for whom his aged mother pleaded with him in vain; his Bishop, PALACIOS, together with a priest; the young wife (a girl of 18,) of Col. MARTINEZ, whose only fault was that her husband had surrendered Humaita, after a protracted struggle, to the Allies; his own brother-in-law, BARRIOS, with his wife, the sister of LOPEZ; Minister BERGES and several other distinguished men. There is little doubt about these murders. Mr. WASHBURN has just received a letter from a German gentleman, who was in Asuncion on the day of its evacuation by LOPEZ, and saw the brother-in-law and sister of LOPEZ, and "a large number of other Paraguayans," executed by his order.

In a retreat, the ferocious despot was terribly cruel to his prisoners. He let none be overtaken. If they lagged from wounds, exhaustion or sickness they were prodded on with the bayenet. If they sank, a knife or the butt of a musket finished them on the spot. In the retreat to Tebicuary, it is said, several hundred were killed in this way, while it is claimed that ninety prisoners, in two groups, were shot down at San Fernando; fifteen or twenty at Loma Negra soon after, and a large number at Villeta, in squads of a dozen at a time.

To his own army and people the Dictator has been equally cruel. The slightest dereliction in duty—even of drill or what not—is said to be punishable by death. His Vice-President was shot on mere suspicion. The wives and daughters of officers who surrendered were usually punished, and never with less than whipping. Torturing was resorted to, and whipping on stocks was common.

Such is a résumé of some of the atrocities charged upon LOPEZ. Many of them are doubtless greatly exaggerated, particularly the wholesale slaughter of prisoners, but there is enough left to fix upon LOPEZ the condemnation which such cruelty deserves.

Mr. Johnson on Army Reduction.

While Congress is busy in reducing the army, President JOHNSON is equally busy in endeavoring not to have it reduced. The batch of promotions he lately sent in to the Senate includes thirty-two in the navy, twenty-one in the army above the grade of Major, and a great number below that grade in the engineer corps, ordnance corps, the cavalry, artillery, and various regiments of infantry.

Now, considering that it is proposed by Congress to "make no more appointments or promotions" in the army until the force is very greatly reduced; that it is especially desirable to reduce and consolidate the staff, and perhaps do away with the ordnance corps in its present form altogether; and considering that, on the very day of these wholesale nominations, the body to which he sent them enacted that no new appointments should be made in the Adjutant-General's, the Inspector-General's, the Paymaster's, the Quartermaster's, the Commissary's, or the Medical Department, (where the majority of Mr. JOHNSON'S highest nominations are made,) surely this zeal of the President not to reduce the army, though but a week remains of his term, is remarkable. We can only compare it with the well-known fact that of the very many officers court-martialed and dismissed from the service during the last two years, hardly one has failed of being reinstated on applying to the President. Had these vacancies alone been left, the work of consolidation would now be far lighter.

When, however, in addition to habitually restoring cashiered and dismissed officers, Mr. JOHNSON also hurries in nominations by the hundred, his course becomes very singular. Whether he regards this last feat as a parting act of courtesy, or whether he regards army reduction as a joke, we do not know; but it is clear that he, at least, is determined not to aid it, and, on the contrary, will do his best to leave as little chance as possible to his successor for "absorption and consolidation."

The Press and the Army During the War—Facts for Gen. Slocum.

In his lecture the other night on the "Military Lessons of the Late War," Gen. SLOCUM took occasion to speak severely of the interference of the Press in the conduct of military affairs, and the damaging influence of its publications. We are not aware that he gave any facts in support of his statements, and we imagine that if called upon for specifications he would have some difficulty in producing and sustaining them.

No one doubts the enormous and decisive influence which the Union Press of the North exercised over popular sentiment during the war; and no one will ever forget how its tremendous enginery was employed to incite patriotic feeling and enthusiasm, sustain public faith, create and uphold the public credit, stimulate enlistments, compel energetic legislation, enlarge and strengthen the army, and enforce the doing of whatever was necessary to be done to secure the triumph of the Union through the passion and patience of the people and the struggles of the Union army. These things at least are beyond dispute; and we believe it is not claiming too much for the Union Press of the North to say that to it is due the supreme credit for the existence and display of those elements of spirit and force which bore the Union flag through storm and darkness to the unquestioned dominancy in which it now floats over the continent.

As for the charge that has so often been brought against it, that it injured the efficiency of our armies and the success of our Generals by its criticisms and exposures, all the evidence of facts and history are on the other side. Not by concealing weaknesses and defects are strength and perfection acquired. Not by upholding imbecility and folly in the management of affairs are vigor and genius produced. Not by permitting the popular power and energy to be wasted is success achieved. But on the contrary. And the effective way in which the loyal Press dealt with such matters as these, was felt at the time by quackery, pretension and imbecility, and is acknowledged to-day by all who know the history of the war.

As to the old cry about the injury the Press wrought by the publication of the plans of commanders and the movements of troops, we supposed all that had passed away with the incapables who attempted to throw on the Press the blame for the failure of their own follies. No commander, who desired to keep the secret of his plans, had ever any difficulty about doing so; and no General, capable of covering his movements from the enemy, ever had cause to complain of their being uncovered by the Press. The correspondents in the army were always under the control of the commanding officers: and we may almost say that, to a man, the distinguished leaders to whom our victories and successes were due, had the least fault to find with the communications which the Press gave to the country. SHERMAN was for a time embittered against army correspondents, because of the way in which the earlier manifestations of his genius were treated; but his enmity was exceptional, and was shared neither by GRANT, THOMAS, nor SHERIDAN. Gen. GRANT, the greatest planner, and most active campaigner, as well as most successful leader among all our Generals, always favored the correspondents of the Press, and the publication (to use his own language) "of all that any of them could find out about his plans or movements."

If Gen. SLOCUM were to cite single instances of the premature publication of military projects, and attempt to show the damage produced thereby, he should feel well assured of his facts. Frequently during the war, news that seemed to be prematurely given out, was published by the express permission or desire of the chief commanding officer. Great advantage was often gained by these announcements. We might, for example, mention a single case which made a great deal of noise at the time. We refer to the announcement, which was made in the TIMES of the 10th of November, 1864, of the intended "great march" of Gen. SHERMAN from Atlanta through Georgia and the Carolinas to Virginia. It has not heretofore been known that that "premature publication" was made under the express permission and with the full knowledge of Gen. U. S. GRANT; and it is a fact that the "premature announcement" subserved the purpose for which it was made.

Among the officers who took part in that great march under SHERMAN were Gen. SLOCUM, and he has doubtless felt, when he looked back over the files of the TIMES and found that the whole line of the march was published in our columns before it was begun, that we had been guilty of one of the crimes for which he berated the Press the other night. But he neither knew the origin of the publication nor the authority under which it was given. We could mention many similar facts about the action of the Press in such matters during the war,—facts which cannot be known, and have never even been surmised by Gen. SLOCUM, but which, now that he is apprised of their existence, ought to make him more cautious hereafter in speaking about the Press.

It is very foolish in Gen. SLOCUM to talk as he has lately done about the conduct of the Union Press during the war. It was one of the great controlling forces of national power; it was the force that created forces. Without it there would have been neither the elements that brought about success, nor the triumph that justified their employment.

MINOR TOPICS.

It turns out to be just as well, after all, that Congress has not adopted any of the financial measures of legislation that have been presented. The extraordinary advance in our bonds in Europe, and the prospect of our credit reaching par long before anybody expected it, add a new and highly important feature to our financial situation, and must be taken into account in legislation. The practical carrying out of GRANT'S four great measures,—retrenchment, economy, honesty, and faithful collection of the revenue,—will make it a very easy matter for the country to get out of all its financial difficulties in a reasonable time.

There is no doubt that BRAINE deserved death as a pirate and murderer; but his pardon and release by the President puts an end to his case. It would certainly have gone hard with him had he ever been brought to trial; but his counsel, doubtless on this account, have managed to postpone the trial from time to time—preferring to keep him in prison until his friends were successful in obtaining a pardon.

An extraordinarily active and excited movement was noted in the Public Funds on Saturday, at a further substantial improvement in prices, though through the early afternoon the dealings ran generally against ruling values, influenced by reports of a reaction (more or less grossly exaggerated) in United States Five-Twenties in the London market from 83, the highest figures yet made at that point. A variety of other vague and unfavorable rumors found currency for a while, including one to the effect that the Schenck Public Credit bill had been very formidably opposed in the Senate, and would probably fail to secure the anticipated support. The mischievous use made, or attempted to be made, of this rumor, may serve as an indication of the vital importance to the public credit of prompt affirmative action on the bill. The market was all much stronger at the close, and the bidding was again quite spirited, the tendency having been decidedly upward.

In another column we print a communication, which we heartily indorse, respecting Mr. BRADY'S invaluable collection of national photographic portraits. The matter is one of great interest and importance, and the suggestions of our correspondent are worthy of serious attention.

We have groaned so long over the decoy of the "legitimate" grama, that it is all the more pleasant to notice its present "revival." For example, BOOTH'S "Romeo and Juliet"—"legitimate" enough certainly—is enjoying one of the largest and most successful runs it has ever had since SHAKESPEARE wrote the play—having just concluded its fourth week, and promising to draw for weeks to come. This great success shows that if managers are willing to present "legitimate" dramas of the best class with the same degree of care and expense that the leg pieces receive, the public are ready to support them. Mr. BOOTH has dedicated to the highest drama the finest theatre in America, and presents his plays with a magnificuousness of style rivaling anything of the kind in the world. As a consequence the public are crowding his theatre every night.

STUART of Philadelphia and STEWART of NEW-YORK, STUART of Virginia and STEWART of Nevada are all urged for appointments in GRANT'S Cabinet. If they all get in we shall have a new Stuart dynasty, and GRANT will again stand by the Stuarts, as his ancestors did in bygone centuries.

The testimony lately taken in regard to the Metropolitan gas nuisance will be placed before the Board of Health to-day for their action. Of course it has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of everybody who has read the testimony that the dry-lime process used in gas-making by the Metropolitan Company is exceedingly damaging to the public health. The nuisance should be peremptorily and immediately abated, and the Company should not be allowed to dilly-dally over the matter any longer.

Two notable resolutions on diplomatic questions were introduced to the Senate on Saturday. One was by Senator SHERMAN, authorizing the recognition of Cuban independence whenever there shall be established an "independent Government de facto, according to the laws of nations." No doubt the recognition will be given when the conditions are fulfilled. But the resolution of Senator COLE, of California, is so extraordinary that we must quote it:

"Resolved, That the President be requested to communicate to the Great Powers of Europe the grave concern with which the United States would regard any interference on the part of those Powers favoring the perpetuation of the Turkish supremacy in the islands of Greece."

It must be confessed that this protest in favor of the Cretans comes rather late. Greece has given up her pretensions, Turkish supremacy is established, and the two Governments are now on such terms, of "amity" as they usually enjoy. None of the Great Powers have interfered, except by diplomacy; and none of them proposed, in the last resort, to do anything more than permit the Turks to take the Greeks in hand. If Senator COLE would read the European news, he would be able to get over his "grave concern."

The more regular children of the pen—if that term, regular, can be correctly employed, in this case—must feel rather jealous to see their business and domain intruded on by Bourbons and other "great oneyers." The members of that Capetian family, having fallen from the throne, are getting on the Press—setting themselves up in bourgeois, so to speak, leaded. Queen ISABELLA has been publishing a "fugitive piece" of protest, and Don HENRY, of Seville, has once and again come out, to "taunt her with the license of ink." But the most interloping case or all is that of the Duke of Aumale, who writes his regular articles for the London Times, and no doubt draws pay for them, thus taking the place of one of the customary Bohemians.

It is exceedingly gratifying to all lovers of human liberty to witness the creditable way in which the Spanish revolution continues to be conducted, in all the successive steps that are taken by its leaders. The admirable speech (published in the TIMES yesterday) delivered by Marshal SERRANO at the opening of the Cortes, enables us to maintain the hopes which we have always entertained, that the Spanish Liberals would be successful in founding a constitutional government. He displays moderation as well as ability, and gives indication that, now he is at the head of affairs, he will justify the faith that has always been placed in him by the advocates of liberal institutions. We hail with delight the entrance of Spain among the free nations of Europe.

There is one consideration which must damp a little the approaching triumph of our national enterprise, in the completion of the great Pacific Railway. The snows of the interior are at certain seasons sufficient to stop the trains for several days at a time. The track of the Union Pacific has been closed for near a fortnight, making a great accumulation of mail matter. A good supply of snow-plows and a regular corps of winter laborers must make part of the working system of that great thoroughfare. The projected northern road from Lake Superior would, probably, be smothered for months at a time; while the proposed southern route would, for this reason, have a great advantage over the others.

Some of the Washington people, under the order to restore the curious property of candelabras, dishes and plates, bureaus, chests of drawers, &c., once belonging to the First President, have probably felt like the Parisians in 1815, when the foreigners began to reclaim the opima spolia of the Louvre. But there is—or should be—only one way in cases of the kind; and such curiosities should have no character of plunder attaching to them. It was lucky that Mr. LYON thought of saving them in the confusion of 1862, when they would, otherwise, have been scattered or destroyed.

The Brooklyn Bank Robbery.

The Police have been searching for the thief who succeeded in robbing the safe of the Park Savings Bank, No. 1,133 Fulton-avenue, on Saturday last, but thus far without success. Yesterday morning, the tin box, which contained the bonds, &c., was found in the stable of JAMES BOYLAN, in Adelphi-street, near Flushing-avenue, where it had evidently been deposited by the thief. It was taken by BOYLAN to the Myrtle-avenue Station-house, when it was found to contain only a book, in which were the accounts of the Park Bank with the Nassau National Bank, showing deposits of nearly $50,000, several checks for small amounts, and other articles; but the bonds had been removed by the thief. All that the rascal really made by the robbery was about $150, as the bonds, which all pertain to the city, are worthless to him, from the fact that he cannot dispose of them without the indorsement of the bank officers. The circumstances show that this was one of the boldest bank robberies on record, the thief having abstracted the property from the safe, while the cashier of the bank, wholly unconscious of danger, stood but a short distance from him. It is thought that the Police may yet secure the thief.

Fire in Beekman-street.

At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out on the rear of the third floor of building No. 29 Beekman-street, and before the flames were extinguished they had caused a damage of about $60,000. The floor where the fire originated was occupied by C. W. BAKER, manufacturer of envelopes, and T. C. BAIRD, book publisher. The loss of BAIRD was about $5,000, and that of BAKER, who had no stock in the building, will not exceed $5,000 The fourth and fifth floors were occupied by ENSIGN & BRIDGMAN, manufacturers of charts and envelopes, whose large stock was totally consumed, and whose loss was about $20,000. The second floor was used by ROSE, BALDWIN & ROSE, whose stock of fancy outskins was entirely destroyed, inflicting a loss of $10,000. W. H. AMES, dealer in paper, occupied the first floor, and his stock was so damaged by water that his loss is estimated at $15,000. The building was owned by the O'Connor estate, and cannot be repaired for less than $8,000. All of these losses are probably covered by insurance, but it being Sunday all of the occupants were absent and the facts could not be ascertained, except in the case of BAIRD, who is known to be fully insured. The cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

ARRIVAL OF THE BREMEN STEAMSHIP WESER.

The steamship Weser, which left Bremen Feb. 13 and Southampton Feb. 16, reached this port yesterday. We print below letters from our correspondents in England and in Spain. Writing from London, our correspondent discusses the Liberal Parliamentary Banquet, the national programme in Parliament, the recent election trials, and the movements and speeches of the American Minister to England. From Madrid we have accounts of the carnival in the Spanish metropolis, a view of the Government programme, and a variety of interesting news.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

The Carnival in Madrid—The Constituent Cortes—The Government Programme—The Coming Man—Civil War—Government Reforms—American Enterprise—Mr. Hale's Receptions.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Wednesday, Feb. 10, 1869.

The Carnival has been in full blast for the last three days, and a stranger visiting Madrid just at this time would never suppose that it brings us to the eve of events which may convert all this mummery into bloodshed and mourning. Out of the hundreds of thousands who participate in the revelry—for all classes, high and low, take their share in it—there are but few who bestow a thought on the possible results of the deliberations of that body which is to assemble to-morrow to decide upon the destinies of Spain. Even PRIM, as he rode along the Prado yesterday attended by a brilliant staff, probably suffered his thoughts to be diverted from his ambitious projects by the motley features and gay abandon of the scene.

Although the turn-out of fine equipages has not, owing to the absence of the aristocracy from the capital, been equal to that of previous years, a stranger could not fail to be struck with the display of taste and wealth which the corrégé has presented every afternoon between 4 and 6. There was not a family in Madrid which either owns or could afford to hire a carriage, that was not to be found in the file. In many of the most aristocratic of these equipages there was one or more masks. Where none of the family were thus costumed, the coachman and footman wore dominoes, with steeple-crowned hats, ornamented with ribbons, so as to entitle the vehicle the privilege of passing out of the ranks. Flying along on horseback, through the centre of the avenue, were to be seen maskers in every variety of fantastic attire, the female element travestied by the wild boys of the University, eliciting shouts of laughter by their equestrianism on saddle and crupper. To add to the enjoyment of the scene, the weather since the commencement of the carnival has been delicious. You can form no idea of the beauty of the afternoons in this high altitude at this season of the year. Cloudless skies, a sun genial without being oppressive, and a total absence of the chilling Northers which at other times visit us, contribute to render the scene one of the most enjoyable that can be imagined. Another distinguishing feature of it is the perfect order which is preserved from the opening to the close of the festivities. Although we are on the eve of exciting events and political passions run high, I have not heard of a single instance in which obnoxious persons have been insulted or otherwise annoyed. I saw plenty of them in their carriages on the drive, and in the license which is allowed on these occasions, it might have been expected that they would have been singled out as the butts of the popular humor, but nothing of the sort occurred. The good taste and sense of self-respect which are the dominant characteristics of the lower orders here prevent them from carrying into their amusements any feeling of ill-humor and bitterness.

As the crowd was returning from the Prado in the evening an incident occurred at the corner of the Culle Seville and Culle de Principe which is worthy of notice. The host was being carried to a dying man, and immediately on the procession making its appearance the revellers unmasked and knelt reverently, a band which happened to be on the spot striking up the Royal March, which is invariably played on such occasions. Some of the students protested against the choice of this air; but their remonstrances were unheeded. You can judge from this little episode of the true character of the Madrid population.

THE CONSTITUENT CORTES.

The one hundred and twenty Deputies whose names were attached to the manifesto of conciliation assembled yesterday evening at the Palace of the Cortes to nominate their ticket for the organization of the Chamber. The following were unanimously selected: President, Don NICOLAS MARIA RIVERO; Vice-Presidents, CANTERO, VEGA ARMIJO, VALERA (Don CRISTOVAL,) and MARTOS; Secretaries, SARDOAL, LLANO Y PERSI and OLOZAGA (Don CELESTINO.)

You will see from the above that M. SALUSTIANO OLOZAGA, the prime mover in the monarchical scheme of the 12th of November, and who aimed at the Presidency of the Chambers has been cast aside, and the man whom he inveigled over from the Republican Party appointed in his place. It is true that this list is only provisional for the organization of the House, but there is very little doubt of its being ratified by the general vote. The rejection of OLOZAGA is hailed with great satisfaction by the public. He is looked upon as a man entirely without principle, though of unquestionable ability, and his occupancy of a position which is of so much importance at the present moment would have been a great danger for the country.

I happened to be at the railroad station this morning when M. OLOZAGA arrived from Paris. Gen. PRIM, MADOZ, VENANCIO GONZALEZ, the Director of the Telegraph, and one or two other officials were there to receive him. MADOZ took OLOZAGA aside and conversed with him long and earnestly, Gen. PRIM remaining apart all the while.

THE GOVERNMENT PROGRAMME.

It is difficult to get at the truth in regard to the course decided on by the Government, but I think I am safe in stating that the Directory scheme has been abandoned. After the Chamber is organized a formal resignation of their posts will be made by the Ministers, but they will be again provisionally appointed to conduct the affairs of the country until the new Monarch is elected. It is stated that Señor FIGUEROLA, the Minister of Finance, is very anxious to retire, and there may consequently be some slight modification in the present ministerial arrangements. As regards the three principal members of the Administration, SERRANO, PRIM and TOPETE, there will be no change. The two candidates for the throne, whose claims will be seriously discussed with the approbation of the Ministry, will be the Duc DE MONTPENSIER and Don FERNANDO of Portugal. The partisans of the former express themselves quite confident of the result, and, perhaps, with reason, for it is notorious that since the arrival of the new Deputies in Madrid large amounts of money have been drawn for on the houses here which hold deposits from the Orleans family. It is not the fortune of the Duc DE MONEPENSIER alone which is being drawn upon for his election. All the family consider they have a personal interest in it, and have subscribed largely to the fund by which it is sought to purchase his way to the throne.

It is useless for me to attempt any fresh revision of the statement which I furnished you of the probable constitution of the Chamber. The first vote will do this more accurately than I can pretend to do. I persist, however, in stating that when the vacant seats caused by the double elections are filled up and the deputies from Cuba and Porto Rico take their places, the Republicans will number at least one hundred and ten. They may also count on some gains from the wing of the Democratic Party which acts under RIBERO. Several Deputies have been elected under Democratic colors who are known to be steady in their Republican convictions.

"THE COMING MAN."

In spite of the adverse appearance of things, PRIM is said to be as firmly determined as ever to try his chance of becoming "Chief of the State." He takes every opportunity of showing himself in public, surrounded by the pomp and circumstance which are due to such a position, and quite recently he attended a military funeral, accompanied by a bodyguard of cavalry. He tried hard to force officers personally attached to him into the higher grades of the army, but on this point SERRANO has remained firm, and there have consequently been several bitter altercations between them. Gen. CABALLERO DE RODAS, who is a creature of SERRANO, has been very outspoken and violent of late in his denunciations of PRIM. A few days ago he took a letter to the Politica assailing him in unmeasured terms, and it was only after great persuasion that he was induced to waive its publication. If PRIM imagines that he will be sustained in his pretensions by the army he is greatly mistaken. The best thing he could do would be to pass over body and boots to the Republican Party, get elected as President, and then try a coup d'etat after the fashion of LOUIS NAPOLEON.

CIVIL WAR.

If the DUC DE MONTPENSIER should succeed in bribing his way to the throne, nothing can save the country from anarchy. The Carlists have been receiving large amounts of arms, and are now thoroughly prepared for a movement. There is every reason to believe that the French Emperor will favor their plans, in the event of the selection of the Orleans Prince. There can be no question as to the fact of the Isabellists and Carlists having fused. Their programme is the Prince of Asturias for King with DON CARLOS as Regent. L'homme propose et Dieu dispose. DON CARLOS will have the best of this bargain. The poor little Prince is the fly which has stepped into the spider's parlor.

The Government is fully aware of the dangers which threaten it from this quarter, and each day's Correspondencia brings the announcement of some fresh dispatch of troops to the frontier. Within a short time there will not be less than 40,000 men concentrated there. There are few well-informed people here who believe in the peaceable accomplishment of the plan of a democratic monarchy. Compromises of this sort have never been very successful, and in Spain they have no chance at all. Absolutism or a republic are the only alternatives which the Spanish mind will admit of.

THE MEXICAN GIRGENTI SCHEME.

Wild as this project may seem it has not been abandoned. It has been merely consigned to abeyance for the present to await the turn that events may take here.

GOVERNMENT REFORMS.

Admiral TOPETE has issued a decree reforming the organization of the infantry of marine. Out of the six independent battalions of which it is at present composed three regiments are to be formed. This will give an opportunity for the appointment of three colonels and as many lieutenant-colonels. In that fact you will find the motive of the decree.

NEW FIREARMS AND CONTRACTS.

American inventors are busy here pushing through their schemes for a share of the public contracts. Gen. BERDAN has, I believe, got his secured, through the aid of Mr. HORATIO PERRY, Secretary to the United States Legation, who has been doing a handsome thing in this line of business. Would it not be well for some one to inquire at the State Department whether such pursuits are compatible with the functions of an American diplomatist. A specimen of the Winchester repeating gun has arrived here, and will be at once submitted to the War Department for experiment. This is the weapon which was recently approved of and adopted by the Swiss Commission after a careful comparison with other muskets.

MR. HALE'S RECEPTIONS.

The Monday reunions at the house of the American Minister have been put a stop to by Lent. They have been well attended by the members of the Diplomatic Corps.

AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

The Liberal Parliamentary Banquet—Justice to Ireland—Election Trials—The Ballot—The American Minister—London Charities.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Feb. 13, 1869.

Ash Wednesday and Lent bring us to the eve of the great event of the English year, the meeting of the Assembled Wisdom.

LIBERAL PARLIAMENTARY BANQUET.

The great Liberal Parliamentary Banquet this week, at the Fishmongers' Hall, was a very magnificent affair in the way of dinner, lights, music, fair ladies, and all sorts of splendor, but in all other respects a miserable fiasco. Mr. GLADSTONE was solemn and earnest, but reticent and weak. The Master Warden had complimented him with a tender conscience as his chief gift, and it grew so very tender that he dared put forth no programme and make no promises. The rest were obliged to follow their leader's example. Mr. LOWE was all but witless, and Mr. BRIGHT was dull. Never was there an incoming Administration, flushed with victory, that had less to say for itself. The only man who seemed master of the occasion was the Chairman—head Fishmonger, in fact. He opened in great force with the first of the loyal toasts, that to Her Majesty the Queen, telling the company why she was so much beloved by the Fishmongers. "It is," he said, "because she is the model of all constitutional sovereigns, the pattern of all domestic virtues, the envy of all other countries, and the pride and glory of our own." After that it is scarcely to be wondered at if the lesser lights, Her Majesty's Ministers, paled their ineffectual fires.

I said they were dull; of course I mean comparatively. Mr. LOWE, who is immersed in Treasury retrenchments, did say that all men liked economy in the abstract, but none in the concrete, and he corruscated mildly about saving money by mending pens. Mr. BRIGHT's only memorable joke was that there might be a stranger thing done than to make him a Bishop, considering what sort of Bishops we have already, while Mr. CHICHESTER FORTESCUE, the Irish Secretary, enlivened the scene by telling an Irish story as good as new, to illustrate English ignorance of the little constitutional peculiarities of the sister island. An Englishman dining with one of the Irish Judges, when there was some disturbance in the country, innocently asked why they did not call out the posse comitatus and put it down." "Because," said the Judge, "our whole business in this country is to try and put down the posse comitatus." It has been a long up-hill business, and now they are going to let the posse comitatus have its own way, remove whatever don't suit it, and see if it won't get quiet at last and keep so. A dull, and, it is hoped, industrious, Parliament has no end of work cut out for it. Disestablishment, education, the ballot, the poor laws, crime, trade, emigration, government of the metropolis, telegraph, railways—these are a few of the vast and intricate subjects that are loudly demanding legislative interference.

JUSTICE TO IRELAND.

The first thing on the national programme is justice to Ireland, which must come now, because it cannot be safely put off any longer. The Irish are importunate and troublesome. They will not take no for an answer; hence they will get what they want, after a weary waiting. The new Lord Lieutenant, Earl SPENCER, dined with the Lord Mayor of Dublin a few days ago. At his guide was Cardinal CULLEN. The soon-to-be disestablished Anglican Archbishop was not present. As he could not get his own consent to walk in to dinner behind, and take his seat below, a red-hatted, red-stockinged Cardinal, and listen to the speeches he must have listened to on the occasion, he wisely kept away.

The speech of Earl SPENCER was as conciliatory and hopeful as one from the Lieutenant of the Queen and Mr. GLADSTONE ought to be. The urgent want of Ireland, he thought, was manufactures. For these they had every facility—plenty of good harbors, abundant coal fields a few hours distant, fine rivers, an admirable climate and no lack of labor. All they needed was capital, and that was close at hand and ready to flow in in any desired quantity. The sole condition it required was peace and security. Religious equality, now about to be established, he hoped would give peace, and universal education secure it. There would then be no bar to the prosperity of Ireland, and all this by the simple method of Church disestablishment. In the name of all the senses, common and uncommon, why was not this plan adopted centuries ago? It would have saved all the quarrels, rebellions, bloodshed and sufferings of the past, and Mr. DISRAELI might have still been Prime Minister. All the woes of Ireland, recorded in story and song, the persecutions, massacres and horrors of ELIZABETH, CROMWELL, WILLIAM of Orange; the fiendish system of the penal laws, the conspiracies of Whiteboys, Ribbandmen, Fenians; all for the maintenance of a Church Establishment for scarcely one-tenth of the population, and now declared to be a blunder to be put aside—a nuisance to be abated! And all this it was left to Mr. GLADSTONE to discover; and he never found it out until one day he found himself out of office—and the place he wanted occupied by Mr. DISRAELI. Then, all suddenly it dawned upon him—a wonderful political inspiration. "In hoc signo vinces." The Church was that day doomed, and Mr. GLADSTONE is Prime Minister—ruler of "the greatest Empire in the world."

Under the circumstances, I do not see how the Archbishop of Dublin could dine with the Lord Lieutenant and Cardinal CULLEN. It was but a day or two before that he and his doomed fellow Bishops had begged the Queen to allow them to meet in Convocation, if only to set their house in order, and try to save something from the impending destruction. They got a short, sharp, decisive "No!" from the Home Secretary; and the Queen went to visit a convent with Lady CHURCHILL.

ELECTION TRIALS—THE BALLOT.

The election trials which have filled the papers for weeks; the exposures of scenes of drunkenness, corruption and ruffianism; the naive indignation of the Judges who talk as if they had been quite ignorant of such practices, and supposed that the hustings and petty booths were as pure as their own ermine—and this is not a figure of speech, for the Judges actually wear real ermine tippets—the exposures of bribery, frauds, profligate debauchery of whole populations, and an utter despotism of "undue influence" have told very strongly in favor of the adoption of the ballot, which these simple, inexperienced people imagine would put an end to all their difficulties. Even old opponents have become enthusiastic friends of the silent snowflake system. Sir C. W. DILKE, in a speech at a recent Liberal banquet, in which he described himself as a lame duck from the recent contest, said no man could understand the question of the ballot who had not undertaken to canvass an agricultural district. Every man's answer, when asked how he intended to vote was the same—"I shall vote as master votes." "What!" said the indignant Baronet, "have you no principles?" "Noa, we's no principles; it makes no difference to us who goes to Parliament, but to keep on the right side of the Squire makes a deal of difference." And so it would if they had the ballot. As if the Squire would not know how every man voted just as well as he does now! What is wanted for the independence and purity of English politics is intelligence, honesty, manliness. As for a man concealing his principles, or his vote, sneaking to the ballot box and furtively dropping in a sealed ticket as he would an anonymous letter, voting as he would rob a hen-roost—it all seems very ridiculous.

But the ballot is now declared to be even more necessary for the manufacturing towns than for the rural districts. These brave English artisans, who got up so many monster meetings and processions in order to get the right of suffrage, (which had been wrested from them at some time and in some way I do not at this moment remember,) are now afraid to vote, when they have gained the inestimable privilege, on account of their employers, the manufacturers. So the brave artisans want the means of exercising the first right of freemen so that nobody will know how they do it. If it were not for the name of being a freeman, a man might almost as well be a slave. So as town and country voters alike plead cowardice and mortal dread of manufacturers and landlords, we shall have the ballot; and you may expect agents to be sent to America by both parties to see how it can be best managed to secure the interests of candidates and voters, the bribers and the bribed.

After all, the simple view of the case which strikes the minds of most Englishmen is this: "I am not obliged to have tenants, servants or workmen who will go to the polls and vote against my interests, and to destroy the value of the very property or business which gives them a living, and I won't. If any man on my estate, or in my factory, does not choose to vote as I do, he may also choose to find another landlord or employer. This is a free country—as free for landlord as for tenant; as free for master as for servant." And in what way, I should like to know, can you hinder a man from carrying this view of the case into practice? They will try the ballot, and it will fail, because the ballot cannot change human nature. It may be a convenient instrument enough, but here it is exalted into a principle.

HON. REVERDY JOHNSON.

Our wonderful Minister is now gone on a starring tour to Scotland, and has had a very jolly time indeed at Glasgow and Edinburgh. They talked free trade to him, and he with his never-failing amiability assured them that the Americans are a sharp, sensible, practical people, and they will be sure to adopt free trade the moment they see that it is giving this country any advantage over them! Mr. JOHNSON also told them that he had been accused of divulging with too much haste the secrets of diplomacy, when the fact was that he had signed two protocols, and in each case the first announcement of the fact was made on the day following in the London Times, which must have got the news from its own Foreign Office. In one case he admitted having let the cat out of the bag, the night before signing the first protocol, at the dinner at Guildhall; but he held that the worst use you could make of a bag was to keep a cat in it, and the worst use of a cat to tie him up in a bag. On the whole, if a man is in a position to make excuses for anything, I don't see that he could do it better than Mr. JOHNSON. What Earl RUSSELL will say to his version of a conversation he had with him the other day about the Alabama, I cannot guess. "It was all along of English red tape," Earl RUSSELL said. "Of course they knew it was all wrong, and must be stopped; but there was the slow and orderly way of doing it; and what with one delay and another, she escaped." "But why didn't you stop her afterward, in the first English port she entered?" "Oh, that's easy enough to say; but the officials were always in the same difficulty." This may be all true enough—but Earl RUSSELL may not care to have this version come out as an appendix to the volumes he has written on the subject to Mr. ADAMS. The Manchester people are reluctant to admit that they are backsliders from free trade, and the Times comforts them by the assurance that ignorance, and ignorance alone, can make any people wish for protection. It may be natural enough for Americans, the people of all the British colonies, the French and people of the Continent generally, to go for protection, for they are all ignorant of the first principles of political economy; but Manchester, centre of intelligence and cotton twist, ought cheerfully to starve rather than go against a single axiom of RICARDO or MILL. Better is a crust of bread on free-trade principles, than roast beef and protection therewith. If the cotton industry dies out, if the iron trade is transferred to other regions, be comforted in knowing that it is in accordance with the laws of trade, and that what is your loss is somebody's gain. This is liberty, equality, fraternity; free trade is the commercial expression of the brotherhood of man—the solidarity of the race. All this is beautiful preaching, but I am afraid that a profit of one farthing more in a pound to the capitalist, or a shilling a week higher wages to the men would have more influence. Mr. REVERDY JOHNSON hit the nail square on the head. Show that free trade gives you an advantage and everybody will be eager to adopt it.

It is but justice to say that the Times is right—unanswerably right—right every time in its logic respecting the balance of trade. It is an utter fallacy to talk of the balance of trade against a country because it pays for a portion of its imports in gold instead of lead or iron—one being as much an export as the other. That's so. But as Mr. LINCOLN would have said: I used to know a farmer in Indiana who had a little illustration of the care on his farm. He had four daughters, smart, industrious girls, and he gave each of them a cow, six sheep, a loom and a spinning-wheel. From these they had plenty of milk, butter, cheese and warm clothing, sold off the surplus, and were very comfortable and happy. But fashions change, and one day the farmer came home and found that his daughters had sold cows, sheep, looms and spinning wheels, and with the proceeds had bought each of them a very handsome silk gown and a nice piano. As a trade, nothing could be more satisfactory. The dresses were beautiful—the music exquisite; or would be when they had spent their whole time for a few years in learning to play. The farmer was entirely convinced that his clever girls had made an excellent bargain, but he could not see how he was to get butter and cheese, flannel shirts and stockings, nor how the silk dresses and piano would pay for his little comforts at the grocery. And even Mr. MILL, great philosopher as he is, has forgotten to explain it.

LONDON CHARITIES.

More than two pages of the Times has been filled with a condensed statement of the statistics of London charities, distributing alms to the amount of £2,000,000 sterling; a statement which threw a Times leader-writer into a state of "bewilderment, incredulity, disgust and despair." Three of these sensations may vanish in time, but the last will remain. London Charities are beggary in excelsis. The crossing-sweeper with his broom at the next corner, is the exact type of the Honorable Secretary with his £300 a year salary, sending out his thousands of circulars, and collecting guinea subscriptions from all parts of the kingdom, to educate his own family and demoralize a few more beggars, who give him this employment. These are the vaunted charities of London—her pride and boast—and it costs one-half the money collected to get the other half, and half of that to spend it. The foundations are worse—but people do not care much for them. Seven hundred years ago some good old soul left a house and garden in the city as a perpetual maintenance for three poor women and a cat. The property is worth now £40,000 a year. Three poor women and their cat—friends of the trustees—are maintained; and the rest of the income, £39,650 per annum, is expended in salaries on the uncles, aunts, cousins, appointed as secretaries, treasurers, chaplains, visitors, &c., who see to the proper distribution of alms, catechise the old women, and stroke the cat.

Four million pounds a year cast into the slough of London poverty by 1,000 charitable societies, makes it only the broader and deeper. Can you wonder that there is "bewilderment, incredulity, disgust and dispair," at the contemplation not only of this vast misery, but at the remedies which only aggravate the disease? Yet you tell me that pauperism is better managed in London than in New-York. I cannot dispute it; but if so, then your "bewilderment, &c.," ought to be in proportion. MONADNOCK.

Brady's Gallery of National Personages—Suggestions as to its Preservation.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Several of the leading City Journals have brought to the public consideration, with much force, within the past year or two, the value and importance of some effective mode to place on a secure basis for use and preservation Mr. BRADY'S invaluable collection of what may be not inaptly styled national photographic portraits.

The extent and completeness of this collection are well known. It has probably no superior in the galleries of photographic art in the world; certainly none in the United States. It needs no minuteness of description from me. It is sufficient that it embraces most of the prominent men and many striking scenes of a marked stretch of time in the history of the nation—historical names before the civil war, and participators in the war, on both sides of that dire conflict.

All paintings, pictorial sketches, and we may now include photographic portraits, which float about in marked periods of a nation's history, are necessarily of an ephemeral existence and are lost, unless collected and preserved by a nation's care and forethought. In the lapse of time these will be mainly effaced from the recollection or knowledge of coming generations, and can be traced only by "counterfeit presentments" through the aid of canvas or photography. The latter opens a source of transmission of the lineaments of statesmen, heroes, publicists, poets and writers, unknown to the ancients, but precious to us and to the age in which we live. If the products of this last mode of transmission be not treasured and preserved, one generation may look in vain to antecedent times for anything like a general knowledge of the features of historical personages. For the few portraits of the men of the Revolution to which there is anything like public access, we are indebted to the fortunate circumstance that Col. TRUMBULL was not less an artist than a patriot and a member of Gen. WASHINGTON'S staff, who persisted in perpetuating in canvas (then no other mode) the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the four accompanying interesting Revolutionary scenes—the "Battle Before Quebec," ("Death of Montgomery,") the "Surrender of Burgoyne," "Washington Taking Leave of the Army," and the "Surrender of Cornwallis." These four paintings embrace nearly all the Revolutionary faces, (except occasionally family portraits in the seclusion of private life,) which have been preserved beyond the period in which they figured. In the instance of the Signers of the Declaration, they have undoubtedly the merit of fidelity, since Col. TRUMBULL was in intimate association with them at the time, and most of them sat to him. This remark is less applicable to the surrender pieces, and to Gen. WASHINGTON'S leave-taking; for most of the participants, it will be seen, whether American or English, look alike—an objection which could not exist in the use of photography, for exact art being the limner, the portrait must be true to life. But Col. TRUMBULL'S efforts to multiply copies for general circulation by engravings, were attended with peculiar difficulties. The art of engraving not being sufficiently advanced in this country to produce the superior style of line engraving required by his artistic eye, he proceeded to London, and at large cost brought out the admirable series of line engravings, not, however, until long afterward known to his countrymen, beyond a few intimate friends. When brought home, finding he could not afford them at less than $50 each set, and not meeting with a ready appreciation and sale at that price, he indignantly nailed them up in boxes, and did not open them until the lapse of fifty years! Thus, perhaps, a thousand scattered engravings and the four fine paintings in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington, are all that remain of the revolutionary portraits which can by possibility be open to the general public eye. But who would part at any price with these inestimable relics of revolutionary life! And yet what a combination of circumstances it required to gather and preserve (in the absence of photography) even these few to the present time!

In their notices of this subject, and the importance of preserving this great collection for future use and observation, and from the hazard of fire and the certainty of being scattered and dispersed, the Press have suggested that it be purchased by or deposited with the New-York Historical Society. Certainly to the keeping of no institution, not national in its organization, could it be more appropriately confided than to a Society which occupies an exalted place in the annals of history and letters in this country. But this collection is national in its nature, and ought to belong to the nation and be deposited where it may be open to the inspection at will of citizens of all quarters of the Republic. Hence its true position is in the Capitol at Washington, in an appropriate room, open at certain hours every day. And certainly in no place in the Union could it be more securely deposited, more easy of access, and where more ample room for its occupancy could be so easily provided.

The effect of this collection at the seat of Government upon the popular mind in all sections could not fail to be salutary. The gathering, as it were, of citizens of all quarters of the Republic, face to face, in a single gallery, would contribute to revive and perpetuate a spirit of good-will; and while it served to dissipate old prejudices, would enkindle a sacred love of country and promote a spirit of good-fellowship.

Aside from these considerations, Mr. BRADY'S zeal nearly from the origin of the photographic art to the present moment, the devotion of his great establishment for years to this object, his liberal views and large expenditure, the persistent and well-directed efforts with which he has pursued the original design during all the interesting years and striking events of his times, deserve recognition and are entitled to reward.

EDWIN CROSWELL.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

There was a good attendance at the matinée on Saturday—the lower part of the house being filled with brilliant toilettes, and the upper part also being occupied to a comfortable extent. "L'Etoile du Nord" was the opera performed. It was rendered somewhat better than on the first occasion, but it is evident that a work of this character requires something more than the hasty preparation bestowed on an opera by DONIZETTI. The leading artists, of course, know their parts, but they have no followers. Completeness in every detail is essential to a good performance of MEYERBEER'S music, especially his light music, and this cannot be secured when the chances of repeating an opera are uncertain.

The past week, considered financially, was a tame one; artistically, it gave us several Italian works, done creditably, but with no result. MEYERBEER is the rage, and his larger works only please. To-night Miss KELLOGG, our only American prima-donna, makes her rentrée in one of her best rôles—Marguerite, in "Faust." This splendid artiste will undoubtedly be received with enthusiasm—as she deserves to be. It is her farewell engagement. In the Spring she goes to Europe to fulfill her numerous contracts.

OPERA BOUFFE.

Mr. GRAU'S revival of "Geneviéve de Brabant" meets with general acceptance, and the piece is therefore continued on the bills. Mme. ROSEBELL was sick last week, and was unable to appear on the night of her benefit, which had in consequence to be postponed. She is, however, announced for to-night. There will be no performance at the Theatre Français on Wednesday—the house being closed to prepare for the grand ball on Thursday.

MISCELLANEOUS.

There were three concerts on Saturday evening—mostly of a semi-private or personal character. At Steinway Hall Mrs. ANNA PAYNE gave her fourth annual concert. The lady is well known in musical circles, and is a concert singer of more than average ability. She was assisted by Mr. LEGGATT, a gentleman who possesses a good voice and a bad, close method; by Mrs. CRUGER and by Mr. J. N. PATTISON, the pianist, who played brilliantly. At Irving Hall the concert was for the benefit of the Spanish Episcopal Church of Santiago. A very fashionable audience was present, attracted not only by the occasion, but by the artists who interpreted the programme. Mme. D'ANGRI has seldom been heard to better advantage. She was ably supported by Mmes. MUSGRAVE, MIXSELL and Miss ARMSTRONG; also by Signor BOY—who has a voice worthy of being transplanted to the opera—Mr. G. F. HALL, and others. The programme was mainly vocal, and familiar at that. It was rendered with animation. At this concert, and at the one to which we shall now refer, Mlle. JOSEFINA FILOMENO appeared. The soirée musicale of Signora ELENA LANARI was given at Chickering's Rooms, No. 11 East Fourteenth-street. We have had occasion heretofore to speak of the lady. She has a cultivated voice, a pure Italian style, and an intelligent knowledge of the difficult art of phrasing. As a concert singer she has but few superiors. Signor RONCONI assisted; also, Signor LAFUENTE—a pianist of much power, but of no originality—all his pieces being modeled after GOTTSCHALK. Mlle. FILOMENO played a piece by GOTTSCHALK, "Murmures Æoliens," and, at Irving Hall, another piece by the same composer from "I Lombardi." She is a careful and neat artiste, with a temperament that is clearly musical, but she seems to be divided between two instruments, the piano and the violin, and we think she excels on the latter. The fantasie caprice of VIEUXTEMPS has rarely been given more daintily than it was by this lady on Saturday night. Her nature seemed to express itself more freely with the bow than on the finger-board. She is certainly a young lady of marked promise.

Both the Sunday concerts were well attended last evening. At Irving Hall the Mendelssohn Orchestral Union introduced several new numbers, and Mr. LEVY, the great cornet player, executed an air and variations by DE BERIOT, and subsequently a melody by SCHUBERT, in a way that was absolutely faultless. Mrs. ARNOLD, a lady pianist, made a successful début, and Mr. ARNOLD played a violin solo effectively. At Steinway Hall there was a fine selection of orchestral music. The soloists were Mme. GUERRETTI (soprano) and Mr. AUGUST ARNOLD, (piano.) The lady is widely and favorably known as a member of Mr. GRAU'S troupe: the gentleman is from Berlin, and new to the community. He played the concerto in G minor by MENDELSSOHN, and the Polonaise in A flat by CHOPIN—morceaux which, at all events, are sufficiently known. Mr. ARNOLD'S touch is good, his execution clean and distinct, and his power more than ordinarily great, without being noisy. Of the many new pianists who have appealed to the public this season, Mr. ARNOLD is, we think, the best,—and a long way the best.

Theatrical.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.

"Romeo and Juliet" is of course the only wear at this establishment. There is nothing whatever to announce, except that the attendance is always great; that there is a matinee on Saturday, and that Mr. EDWIN ADAMS plays in the evening of that day.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.

"Much Ado About Nothing," with its beautiful mise en scene and costumes, will shortly be withdrawn. Mr. ROBERTSON'S new play of "School" is already in active preparation, and will be brought out as soon as possible. No one should miss the opportunity of seeing SHAKESPEARE'S great comedy. The chance may not soon occur again, for after all it seems that the "divine Williams" does not pay.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Some changes have occurred at Booth's Theatre. Mr. MARK SMITH, we hear, has resigned his position of stage manager, although he still remains a member of the company, and Mr. FRANK LAWLOR has fulfilled for the past week the part of Tybalt, in place of its previous representative, whose notorious predisposition to "indisposition" might have excused engagement in the first place. There was once a manager who used to appendix all his advertisements for actors with this significant line: "No talented drunkards need apply."

Miss BLANCHE GREY has been received in "Ixion" and "Kenilworth" at the Washington theatre with all her former favor. On Friday night there was an alarm of fire at this theatre, (the National,) which caused intense excitement, some people being terribly crushed. Nothing serious happened, however, and there was no foundation for the alarm.

The dramatic season at Fisk's Opera House will scarcely begin before the 1st of April. Mr. TAYLEURE, who has been some time in Paris on business connected with his proposed programme, is to start on his returning voyage to-morrow, the 27th. Shakspearean spectacle, as we have already announced, is to be the opening attraction. "The Tempest" will be produced with such splendid accessories as Mr. TAYLEURE has been able to purchase in London and Paris. It is asserted that SARDOU'S new historical drama, which has not yet been done in France, has been purchased for the new Opera House by Mr. TAYLEURE, and will constitute the second programme of the new season.

Cheap amusements yield rich profits, we should judge. The most popular god of the variety business, the elaborate Mr. TONY PASTOR, has recently become a landed proprietor to the extent of a brown-stone "mansion" worth $17,000. The Bowery boys contributed this amount to Mr. PASTOR'S account in twenty-five-cent currency stamps.

CHANFRAU, the comedian, is in Texas. LOTTA appears at the Boston Theatre on the 15th of March. LUCILLE WESTERN and her sister's husband (J. A. HERNE) are starring together in Virginia City. HERNANDEZ, an actor, who attempted to murder his wife in Omaha, has been sent to prison for fourteen years.

Missouri State Bonds.

I have observed the old bonds of the State of Missouri (issued before the Legal-Tender act) are payable by their terms in "gold and silver." Since the United States Supreme Court has decided that such contracts cannot be paid in "greenbacks," are not the holders of such bonds justified in expecting that great State to sustain its credit by making its future payments of interest and principal of such bonds in "gold and silver," according to the terms of the contract? P. S.

We reply to our correspondent that a State cannot be sued in the United States Courts, but the Railway Companies that indorsed and negotiated these Bonds might be, after they mature in 1872 to 1877, if Specie payments should not then have been resumed, or the State should refuse to abide the letter of the contract, which we hope Missouri will then be too rich and prosperous (to say nothing of the legal question) to do.—[ED. TIMES.

The Catholic Troubles in Auburn—Card from Father O'Flaherty.

The Auburn News of yesterday publishes a long card from Rev. THOMAS O'FLAHERTY, who was removed from the pastorship of the Church of the Holy Family in that city, by the Catholic Bishop. After thanking his congregation and the American people of the city for their kindness, Mr. O'FLAHERTY says:

There are three questions at issue.

First—Has Bishop MCQUAIDE a right to force a priest on the congregation of the Holy Family against their will, so universally expressed last Sunday? I maintain he has no such right, especially as this priest is well known to the people, and was removed from here before by an order from the Holy See, directed to Bishop TIMON. Yet, I do now, as I did last Sunday, advise the congregation to receive him for peace sake, and wait for the Providence of God to rectify matters.

Second—Has Bishop MCQUAID a right to remove me from my position as Dean and Pastor of the Church of the Holy Family without canonical cause—without sufficient reason? I maintain he has no such right. He has not given any cause whatever, or any reason for such course of action. I claim to be still Pastor of the Church of the Holy Family, although not exercising jurisdiction.

Third—Has Bishop MCQUAID a right to suspend me from the "exercise of the ministry," because forsooth I will not accept another parish from him. I maintain he has no such right. I subjoin his letter to me:

Rev. Thomas O'Flaherty:

REVEREND SIR: As you have refused to go to the mission to which I appointed you, and have made known to the public through the newspapers your determination not to leave Auburn, I hereby suspend you from the exercise of the ministry.

BERNARD, Bishop of Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 20, 1869.

This letter will tell for itself. Because I did not, at three days' notice, hurry on to another mission or parish, and leave my parochial affairs and business matters unsettled, I must be suspended from the exercise of the ministry.

I claim no immunity for my age, long services, and position in the American Church, but I will say wherever the statement is read, rational and reflecting people will be able to judge of the conduct of Bishop MCQUAID. He has precipitated this thing for the purpose of inflicting penalties, knowing well that my business and parochial affairs would not permit me to leave at such short notice. I published my card in the newspapers, only in reply to his letter and telegraph, appointing another in my place, and published in the newspapers previous to anything from me. I could not, possibly, under the circumstances in which I found myself, hurry out of my parish immediately to obey the unjust and arbitrary orders of Bishop MCQUAID. I now tell him, that his fulminations of suspension and threatened excommunication have no terrors for me. They are entirely uncalled for, they are unlawful and unjust, and, therefore, null and void. I am an American citizen protected by American laws, and I will live here in Auburn until the decision on my appeal and that of my congregation shall be obtained. I will at the same time give all rational and just obedience to the Bishop. I will not exercise jurisdiction, pending appeal, but until the final appeal is decided, I will regard myself as Pastor of the Church of the Holy Family. * * *

Again, I thank the American people of Auburn, for their kind sympathies and fearless protection. It is a bright spot of my life which shall always be remembered with heartfelt gratitude.

PERSONAL.

Hon. E. M. STANTON is suffering under a severe bronchitis, but is otherwise in good health. With the return of warm weather he expects to be restored to his usual strength.

Mr. GEORGE G. VALENTINE, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Northboro', died somewhat suddenly in that place on Wednesday last. He has long filled some of the prominent offices in Northboro', and was universally respected as a good citizen and an honest, upright man. As a mark of respect, the stores and places of business in that town were closed during his funeral.

Gen. LEE was invited to attend the supper given by the literary Association of Alexandria on the 22d of February, but declined to be present.

THE INFLUENCE TALE EXIST-ing, prohibiting transfers of portions of the stock of this Company having been dissolved, notice is hereby given that the transfer books will be opened on the morning of Monday, the 15th inst., and will be closed at the close of business on Saturday, the 27th inst.

Owing to the considerable time for which the books have been closed, because of the change in location, and the probable large amount of stock awaiting transfer, it has become necessary to defer the payment of the dividend heretofore advertised for the 20th inst. until the 15th of March next.

For the purpose of facilitating the preparations for its payment, stockholders intending to transfer are requested to do so without delay.

The payment of the Dividend on the "Interest Certificates" issued under the resolution of the Company passed Dec. 19, 1868—also advertised for the 20th inst.—is still enjoined until the further order of the Court.

An Engraved "Interest Certificate," in more appropriate form for substitution for the temporary, for the printed one now outstanding. Public notice will be given when the exchanges can be made.

ROCK ISLAND ARSENAL, Jan. 25, 1869

AUCTION SALES.

PEREMPTORY SALE
AT AUCTION.
JAMES M. MILLER
WILL SELL ON MONDAY, MARCH 15,
AT 12 O'CLOCK, AT EXCHANGE SALESROOM,
NO. 111 BROADWAY,
FORTY-EIGHT PARCELS OF LAND
CONTAINING ABOUT
181 LOTS,
ESTATE OF LEWIS G. MORRIS.

The demand for semi-rural residences must be considered not only a prominent characteristic of the present activity in real estate, but is also evidence that the increasing population of the City of New-York will make its suburbs indispensable auxiliaries. It is not doubted that part of Westchester County, embraced by the contemplated sale, will become a part of the great and growing City of New-York.

The lower portion of the county is attracting great attention as a suburban location, with the positive value of a City property, being considered as much a portion of New-York City as that property above the line of Harlem, within the City limits. And being at this time more accessible, is already rapidly improving with the erection of those neat and elegant cottages that are so chaste in adorning a landscape, and in which the comfort of a family is secured at such a great saving as compared even with the circumscribed limits of a floor in a City dwelling. The great feature of Westchester County at present in this connection, viewed from a city stand-point, is the which is one of the broadest and finest avenues in the world for the general characteristics of dimensions, locality and the beauty of surrounding and adjoining scenery.

It commences on the northerly side of Harlem River, directly opposite the termination of the 7th-av. Grand Boulevard and 155th-st., and is connected with this City by the Central Bridge, which spans the river at that point. The Commissioners of Central Park, when this tract shall be placed under their control, will lay out several "new drives" and avenues, and connect them by bridges with the boulevards on New-York side.

The probable consolidation of this part of Westchester County with New-York City, the popularity of Central-av. as a drive, the proximity of the Harlem and 3d-av. cars, and the proposed underground railroad, make it at once desirable for building purposes or for investment. The location of this property is superb, and a fine view of Central-av. is presented from all parts. For maps and further particulars, apply to the auctioneer.

REAL ESTATE AND RENTS.

Rapid Increase of Real Property Values—Its Cause and Course—No General Advance in Rents Probable for the Coming Year.

It requires no great amount of discernment to make one aware of the fact that the constant push of our City population is toward the north end of Manhattan Island. Down-town residences are becoming less numerous every year, while the erection of buildings for business purposes in their stead is continually carried on. Trade is extending itself across town in the lower sections of the City, and all that portion of New-York south of Fourteenth-street, from river to river, is evidently destined, at no very distant day, to be devoted entirely to the imperious demands of commercial traffic. So great has been the increase of trade, that in almost any portion of the section we allude to, real property has become altogether too valuable for residence purposes. The staid old Gothamites who, half a century since, lived in State-street, and imagined that the Battery (then the evening resort of the bon ton) would remain "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," and that their palatial homes, (speaking after the manner of things in that day,) would be kept sacred from the intrusion of trade and traffic, could they now arise from their graves, would find that commerce is no respecter of the antiquities; that no matter how hallowed the associations which may have consecrated their former hearths and homes, all have had to recede before the inroads of Mammon. And what is true of this locality holds good regarding all sections of the lower wards.

In the Fourth and Sixth Wards, even, where tenement-houses once outnumbered all other classes of buildings, and where pestilence was annually bred in consequence, there are indications that commerce is gradually spreading itself and making these human hives give way before its onward and unresisted march. There is going on, in fact, constantly, a rooting out of the rookeries, and a double benefit is thus being conferred on the City by the augmenting traffic which shows itself all around us. East Broadway, where once were the residences of our wealthy citizens, is fast becoming exclusively devoted to the domiciliation of tailors, shoemakers, and the mechanic classes, while over and anon, the presence of lager-beer saloons where once were the parlors of the rich and stately, plainly evinces the fact that this whilom abode of wealth and fashion is settling up by honest, hard-working Teutons of less stylish pretensions. These, in time, will locate elsewhere; and having, like all the other thoroughfares down town, gone through the successive gradations that mark the establishment of commercial traffic, East Broadway will at last be unconditionally resigned to business purposes exclusively. The east side of the City, skirting the river from Corlear's Hook to Turtle Bay, (foot of Forty-sixth-street,) has not increased in value as rapidly as property on the North River side. This is possibly owing to the fact that Hell Gate presents a standing obstacle to its advance, in a ratio proportioned to that which obtains on the opposite side of the City. As measures are in progress to do away with this impediment to navigation, it is probable that a rise in value will soon be felt by all property east of the Bowery and between the two points just named. The East Side Improvement Association is doing much to bring about this highly desirable state of things. When it shall be effected, the increase of trade arising therefrom will necessarily create a demand for sites for large stores, warehouses, &c., and the population now domiciled in the streets running from, as well as those running parallel with, the East River, will be compelled to find residences in the upper portions of the City. Business is also creeping into the Fifth-avenue, Fourteenth and other streets that, not many years since, were supposed to be safe from its intrusion. The advance of trade in these select localities is first made known by the presence of fashionable tailors' and milliners' stores, which are patronized only by the wealthiest of our citizens. As time goes on, however, other tradesmen gradually creep into these streets, owing to the inevitable law that one kind of business, when established in a thoroughfare, always draws others in its wake, and thus, in a few years, the residents are fairly hunted out by the growing demands of trade for additional room, and are compelled to find other places of domiciliation. Of course this has a tendency to increase the value of up-town property, and owners, taking advantage of the rise, put it in market. The increased value, however, is often fictitious. We know of one instance where a speculator in real estate bought at auction, just one year ago, a plot of land in the vicinity of Central Park for $5,000, and has just disposed of it at private sale for $10,000, realizing 100 per cent. profit. There can be no legitimate cause for so sudden a rise as this in property values, for nothing has taken place within the intervening year to warrant it; yet the sale was made with facility. This probably is, however, an exceptional case. Four plots in Tenth-avenue near Seventy-fifth-street were purchased five years ago for $800 each, and were sold a few days since for $9,000. Messrs. BROWN, BROTHERS & Co., lately made a purchase, at private sale, of lots on Sixty-third, Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth streets, near Grand-avenue, for $45,000. A block of land bounded by Seventieth and Seventy-first streets, Eighth and Ninth avenues, was sold for $540,000. A single lot in Seventy-seventh-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, brought $6,000; and lots in the middle of the block, in Seventy-first-street, between Eighth and Grand avenues, were sold for $8,000. The tendency of those who desire to erect residences seems to be to locate above Fifty-ninth-street, the southerly extremity of the Park, and property in that section is consequently daily advancing in value. Many purchasers, however, in anticipation of the "good time coming," when we are to have steam communication, by underground railroad or otherwise, with the extreme end of Manhattan Island, are investing in lands around Fort Washington, and even still further northward, in the direction of Spuyten Duyvil Creek. The sale, in October last, of 128 acres of the Dyck man estate, comprising the site of old Fort George, which was divided up into 151 plots, each containing from 3½ to 11½ City lots, has greatly tended to draw attention to this portion of the island, and has turned the tide of speculation in this direction. There is every reason to believe that the ventures made here will prove to be highly profitable.

The population of the City of New-York, in 1825, is recorded as 166,086; in 1835, as 270,089; in 1845, as 371,213; in 1855, as 629,810, and in 1860 as 813,662. Assuming these figures as a basis, in less than twenty years the City will contain more than 2,000,000 of inhabitants, and, of necessity, all the available parts of the island will be covered with improvements. What aspect it will then present it is impossible to define; but reasoning from analogy and from an intimate geographical knowledge of the island, the probabilities are that wharves will border the City to Spuyten Duyvil Creek, while the high land from Manhattanville to Kingsbridge will be occupied by the residences of the wealthiest citizens. What City lots of the regular size, 25 by 100 feet, will then be worth, on the heights of Fort George, or on Broadway in that neighborhood, no one can with certainty say; but is it not safe, in the light of the past, to predict that the prices of the first will equal those paid for lots on Murray Hill, and the prices of the second equal those now paid for lots on Broadway, between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets? When the cross streets north of Fifty-ninth-street shall be cut through and properly improved, and the public parks, drives and boulevards, already contemplated by the Central Park Commissioners, shall be completed, property in this north-western section of the island will become more valuable than the most sanguine now anticipate.

At present more buildings are being erected on the easterly side of the City, above Forty-second-street, taking Sixth-avenue as the dividing line, than on the westerly side, for the reason that streets in the first-mentioned section are already opened, and many of them are graded and paved. On the west side, however, there are few opened streets from Fifty-ninth to One Hundred and Sixteenth. The number of residences erected in the City during the year 1868 is 1,874, being 215 more than in 1867. Of this number upward of 900 were built in the Nineteenth Ward alone. The number of buildings commenced during the year, but not completed on the 1st of January last is 2,112. There is every prospect that, when the Spring shall have fairly set in, the building business in the upper portion of the City will be unusually brisk. Capitalists are beginning to appreciate the fact that investments in real estate, on town are likely to pay as handsome profits as can be realized from any other class of money ventures, and are consequently turning their energies, to a very great degree, in this direction. The erection of residences on the north end of the island is keeping pace with the increase of our population; and when improved means of travel and communication between the extremes of Manhattan shall be fully established, it will leave the entire lower section of the City exclusively in the hands of trade and commerce. Before another score of years shall have passed by, although there may be a few blocks of tenement-houses scattered here and there in the business part of the City, it is probable that the homes of all who lay claim to being even moderately "respectable" in the social world will be found either above Fortieth-street, or in the suburban districts outside of the Metropolis. The completion of the contemplated bridges across the East and Harlem Rivers, will tend to draw off masses of our teeming population to Long Island and Westchester, though, before that time comes, doubtless, the towns and villages adjacent to New-York (except such as are in the State of New-Jersey) will constitute part and parcel of the Empire City, and be all under one municipal government.

It is not probable that rents will be increased for the year commencing in May next, at least so far as single residences are concerned. There is no scarcity of houses to let, as may be made fully apparent by calling at the office of any real estate broker. The opinion generally entertained among the majority of these gentlemen is, that rentals will remain at about the present figures. Those who have on hand houses that are to be vacated on the 1st of May, ask the same rents as are now being paid for them, and entertain no fears that the demand for residences will exceed the supply. Of course there are some exceptions to this statement as to rentals, and cases exist where an increase is asked for by landlords; but for this prospective increase there are special causes, such as improvements introduced into the buildings or their surroundings, increased facilities for City travel by means of railroad lines lately put in operation, &c. But where there is no such special cause tending to make a particular residence more desirable than it was on the 1st of May last, there is, as a general rule, no higher rent demanded than is now paid. Exceptional cases exist, too, where avaricious landlords are attempting to get advanced rentals from their tenants on the ground that a rise in rents is going to be generally demanded. These need not be frightened into paying increased rates on this account, however, for houses may be procured from owners who are content to get the prices that they now obtain; and if tenants generally will give evidence that they "read the papers," and know what the true state of things is, as well as the landlords themselves, they will find that the latter will not be exceedingly strenuous in pressing their demands for an increase. When a landlord has a tenant from whom he is regularly receiving his stipulated rent, he will not be anxious to lose him, and run the risk of getting one instead who may not be so prompt in his payments. Last year, led away by the cry that was set up as to a scarcity of residences on the market, many landlords parted with good tenants, and got in their places others who either did not pay at all, or who were so dilatory in meeting their obligations that they gave the landlords much annoyance; and in some cases the places so let remained in that condition for many months after the first of May. It may be said with regard to tenement-houses, however, and as to the letting of apartments therein, that a desire is generally manifested by owners to demand an increase of rent. The landlords of these always endeavor, about a month or two before May day, to recommend to their invariable tenants, like Oliver Twist, for "more;" and as the erection of this class of new buildings has not kept pace with the putting up of houses designed for single families, (or for two families at most,) such as are forced, by a lack of pecuniary means, to find their homes in tenement rooms, may be compelled to submit to the payment of higher rentals. This state of things can never be properly remedied until additional and more speedy facilities are provided for reaching the upper portion of the island, or those districts adjacent to the City, where property and rents are now held at comparatively low figures.

There are numerous reasons this year why there should be no general increase in rents. More buildings were erected in 1868 than in many previous years during the last decade. A very large proportion of these belong to parties who heretofore have lived only in hired houses, but who now have risen to the status of real estate owners, and who will leave their present domiciles in the City awaiting occupants. This reason will apply particularly to Brooklyn, where the building business was remarkably brisk during the past year. In the Ninth Ward of that city alone, incredible as the statement may appear, there were erected during the year 1868 upward of two thousand houses, most of which were built by speculators, and all of which will be with tenants on the 1st of May. The putting into operation of the Southside Railroad, on Long Island, too, has been the cause of leading men of moderate means to invest in lots where they could be purchased at cheap rates along the line of that road, and within an hour's ride, or less, from Williamsburg. Upon these, modest but comfortable tenements have been erected, and the month of May will find them occupied by whilom tenants in New-York, but now owners of these suburban residences. "Moving Day" will, in fact, if present indications are to be relied on, witness a greater exodus from the City of all classes of tenants than has ever before been known, and if those who are compelled by the nature of their avocations, or who from any other cause desire to remain residents of the Metropolis are led to submit to a demand for increased rent under the belief that other houses are not to be had, the fault will be simply their own.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Obsequies of the Late David T. Valentine—Discourse by Rev. Dr. J. R. Kendrick.

The obsequies of the late DAVID T. VALENTINE took place yesterday at the Baptist Tabernacle, Second-avenue, near Tenth-street, the church in which the deceased gentleman worshiped for twenty-five years. It had been announced that the solemn services would begin at 10:30 o'clock, but long before that hour a large congregation occupied every part of the church, except such seats in the centre aisle as were reserved for the use of the relatives of the deceased and members of the Municipal Government, with which Mr. VALENTINE was so long and so honorably connected. At 10:30 o'clock the funeral procession, which had formed at Mr. VALENTINE'S late residence in East Twenty-fifth-street, proceeded thence to the Tabernacle, and the corpse was born up the main aisle and deposited in front of the preacher's desk, where the upper half of the lid was removed, leaving the features of the deceased exposed to view. The appearance of the corpse was singularly life-like. The remains were inclosed in a highly-polished burial-case of rosewood, with heavy mountings of plated silver. This bore also a silver plate, on which were inscribed the name, age and date of death. A cross and wreath of camellias were placed on the lid of the casket. The pall-bearers were Ex-Judge James R. Whiting, Edward Colgate, Samuel Shardlow, Smith Sheldon, James Cooper, A. J. Winterton, William Wheeler and J. M. Bruce. All the above-named gentlemen, except Judge WHITING, are deacons of the Tabernacle Church, of which Mr. VALENTINE was likewise a deacon. The widow, children and other relatives of the deceased occupied seats near the pulpit, and behind them were seated the representatives of the City Government. As the procession of mourners marched slowly up the aisle the choir chanted a dirge, which, being concluded, Rev. J. S. HOLME, of Trinity Baptist Church, read the 25th and 26th verses of the xith chapter of St. John: "I am the resurrection and the life," &c., and also the xvth chapter of I. Corinthians. Rev. GEORGE HATT, City Missionary, then offered up prayer. "He thanked God that he whose lips are closed in death was made a partaker of Divine grace, and had evinced his undying love for God's glory; that he was never ashamed of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, surrounded though he often was by men of different creeds and different characters; and that, to the end, he remained steadfast to the teachings of faith." The prayer being finished, the choir sang the child hymn, commencing

"How blest the righteous when he dies
When sinks the weary soul to rest."

Rev. J. RYLAND KENDRICK, D. D., Pastor of the Tabernacle, then preached the funeral discourse. There was, he doubted not, some passage in the Bible indicative of the lives of each of God's children; and with regard to this particular Christian soul who had been called hence, and whose demise they now so deeply regretted, he thought the Scripture might supply a word that would emphasize their ideas. In the 36th verse of the xiiith chapter of Acts he read: "After he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep." This is spoken of King David; but were he (the preacher) called upon to write the epitaph of their deceased friend and brother Christian, he knew of nothing that would more strikingly indicate the life of Mr. VALENTINE than the sentence he had just read. David's life showed that his heart was in the business of serving God. But he likewise served his own age faithfully; and, in serving it, he served all the ages. After dwelling on this topic at some length, and showing how, like David's, in this respect was the life of the deceased, the speaker alluded to the dignity and reward of a useful public career. Such a life is sublime with the inspirations of beauty. To serve the present age is the duty of every man, each acting in his own allotted sphere, and exercising whatsoever talent God has given him. The true minister must inevitably be of service to his fellows, and must leave his impress wide and deep on the age that comes after him. Our first duty is to serve God; but we cannot disconnect this from the service of mankind; they go together—piety and usefulness, religion and philanthropy. Though, alas, it is true, many men of warm and charitable hearts, practical philanthropists in every sense, who are without religion. He would say nothing to dispraise them, nor to lessen their charitable impulses; but candor compelled the avowal that, in the highest and best sense, they were not serving their generation according to the will of God. To fulfill this requirement, religion must be intimately connected with, and be the mainspring of all our actions. It became the public officer as well as the citizen in private station. Although, he said, he could not fully subscribe to the doctrine that an honest man is the noblest work of God, he confessed that he reverenced that quality which is described by the strong but homely word "integrity." He maintained a profound respect for honesty in public life, whether it be found at Albany, in Washington, or in this great metropolis; but, noble as was the honest man, the Christian man was nobler still. Their deceased friend came fully up to this requirement. The useful Christian life is sure of its reward. There is nothing more true than the old aphorism, "Virtue is its own reward." There is a positive luxury in doing good, and by the force of our example influencing others in the same course. It is something consoling to grow old in the consciousness of being esteemed by a whole community. For such a man as this—for the aged Christian—dying is but going home, and departure hence is simply to enjoy the full fruition of eternal beatitude. Such a life—such a death, he believed, was DAVID T. VALENTINE'S. His life was a public one. Few names in our great City were better known than his; few men were more respected. He was a gentleman of the old school—another of the old landmarks of New-York society now removed. The reverend preacher then briefly sketched the life of the deceased, as heretofore given in the TIMES, and paid a glowing tribute to his many virtues, social as well as purely religious. His thirty-one years' service as Clerk of the Common Council show his capacity, as well as the implicit trust that was reposed in him. Notwithstanding the mutations of party politics, he was always retained in office; and after having passed through so many years of service, the breath of suspicion dares not to-day asperse the character he has left behind him. The speaker then alluded to Mr. VALENTINE'S fondness for the olden times in New-York, and the great pleasure he always took in conversing respecting them. He spoke, also, of what had often been remarked about him, his strong resemblance to GEORGE WASHINGTON, and said that every one would remember how this thought occurred to their minds when they first saw the deceased. Much as he would be missed in civil life, however, he would be still more regretted by the congregation of which he was so devoted and pious a member. He was prized as one who served with all the ardor of his nature the cause of Jesus Christ. At 15 years of age he joined the Baptist denomination, and was baptized in the old Mulberry-street Church, by Rev. Dr. MCLANE. In 1842 he was made a deacon of the Tabernacle Church, and continued in the discharge of his diaconate duties until his death. He was in truth, a devoted Baptist of the old school. When, in 1868, he left the public office he had held so long, his mind and body missed their accustomed stimulus, and general debility ensued. Throughout all his illness, however, his trust was in his Saviour, and his departure hence was calm and peaceful. Literally, "he fell on sleep," and went to the bosom of his Father and his God. The old and faithful clerk has ceased to write; the hand of the scribe has forgot its cunning, and cares of office no longer vex his brain. But he has gone to scrutinize the books the Recording Angel is writing for us all, and to receive the reward of his faith and unbounded trust in Jesus Christ. The preacher then addressed words of consolation to the bereaved relatives, and to the members of the congregation with whom he worshiped so many years, and closed his eloquent discourse with the hope that they would all be reunited in Heaven, whither the deceased had simply gone in advance of them.

The closing prayer was then offered up by Rev. J. S. HOLME, after which was sung the hymn,

"I would not live alway," and the solemn services were finished with the Benediction, pronounced by Rev. GEORGE HATT.

An opportunity was then given for the congregation to take a final look at the remains, after which they were conveyed to Green-Wood Cemetery, followed by a large train of mourning relatives and friends.

Yesterday afternoon a special service was held in Grace Chapel, Fourteenth-street, for members of the Metropolitan Police Force. There were about 400 men present, with several Captains and Sergeants, and also a fair attendance of the members of the congregation, so that the chapel was well filled. Prayers and a passage of Scripture were read by Rev. Mr. PROUT. The order of evening prayer was omitted on the occasion, but a selection from the Collects of the Church, interspersed with hymns and anthems.

Rev. WALTER DELAFIELD preached, taking his text from the Gospel of St. Luke, 24th chapter, and 47th verse, "Beginning at Jerusalem." These, he said, were among the last words of our blessed Lord upon earth, and therefore full of deep significance and import to us all. The eleven apostles were gathered together in their upper chamber, in the Holy City, in loneliness and dismay. Two disciples had just returned from Emmaus with tidings. "The Lord is risen, indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon;" and while they were conversing thus He stood in their midst and said, "Peace be upon you." Then opened they their understandings, that they might understand the Scriptures, and said: "Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name, among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." The Lord, in founding his Church, would have its corner stone laid in Jerusalem, because the city is more important for the success of any scheme than the country. The history of cities is a history of influences. Hence arises it cities a fourfold influence—commercial, political, literary and ecclesiastical. Our great King condescends to use the material creatures of His hands for the promotion of His earthly kingdom. The cities, therefore, where wealth, commerce and intellect aggregate are His great workshops, and their temporal welfare has ever an important consideration to the Church. And there is another view of the text. What the city is to the country, our heart is to our whole inner man. It is the regulator of the aggregate, the Jerusalem of our nature. It is the duty of all to spread abroad a knowledge of the Gospel, and win the hearts of men to morality and religion. How is this work to be accomplished, and by whom? There are two bodies of men upon whom specially is devolved the improvement and safety of all cities—namely, clergy and policemen. One aims with earnest devotion at the hearts of mankind, striving to lay broad and deep the foundations of piety and principle, because they know that whatever the heart may be, the activity will heal time with it. The other walks the patient round of watchfulness, keeping guard over the rights and liberties of the people. One is Christianity in precept; the other is morality in practice. Were the world perfect there would be no need of either; as it is there is great need of both. I have stood near by the station on some Winter's night, when the biting wind was heaping up the snow, when all the people of the street were sound asleep in their houses, and no light save the street lamp struggled in the storm and darkness. I have watched the band of stalwart men come forth upon their duty, so full of quiet courage and unexpressed determination to be true to their post, come what might; and I have journeyed homeward well assured that, as far as human aid can go, we might all rest in peace. There has been of late an effort on the part of many to weaken public confidence in the Police of this City. I am sorry for it. True, there have been crimes undetected; true, there have been men found unfaithful to their trust; but let him who can put his finger on a perfect system anywhere upon this planet, a system composed of faithful men alone—let such a man, I say, cast the first stone at this Department. When there were twelve apostles and one traitor we may not look for perfect groups of men. And as to detecting crime, how can a man with a beat half a mile square be everywhere at once? How can a little hand of 2,000 men, no matter how faithful, be in every part of a city with nearly a million of inhabitants, at one and the same time? The thing is impossible. We challenge the statistics of any land, of any city, to show a nobler record than that of our New-York Police force for the past eight years. Your record is noble enough; you need not fear for that. But, brethren, as I pass you on the street, in my daily round of visits, I sometimes wonder what your own inner life may be. Among the clergy, the very constancy with which their life is held among sacred things, tends, unless most carefully guarded against, to engender a thoughtlessness as to their value. It is only by constant watchful prayer that we are enabled to preserve our spiritual life in its freshness. But with you, it is the very opposite of this. Your life must of necessity be one of evil associations. You must see continually the worst side of poor humanity. You breathe an atmosphere of distrust, of alarm, of crime. Well, what then? The Bible tells us that "evil associations corrupt good manners." Do you preserve yours untainted? I am speaking of the heart, brethren, for what the city is to the whole inner man. It is the regulator, the aggregator, the Jerusalem of our nature. Every work that is done for our souls must begin there. Have you passed through all the dens of iniquity to which your duty called you, listened to all the wickedness of immoral public amusements when you must needs be on duty, yet with untarnished virtue and unsullied conscience? Just as the golden sunlight pours down from Heaven, peering into many a place of wretchedness and sin, and yet returns heavenwards as it came. Nay more, have you like that ray of sunshine sought by your very presence to show a way of escape to some poor lost trembling sinful creature, by leading him to his Saviour; or at least to bring a blush of shame upon his cheek? What wondrous opportunities the Lord gives you to be preachers of His good tidings to lost men. You go, where we can never be called for; you see what we can never see, sinful men and women with the veil of their sinfulness torn aside. There can be no need of an argument about eternal punishment with you; for your whole experience is chiefly connected with punishment—with the determined separation of bad from good; erring, lost men and women from the pure, the holy, and the good. Surely your daily life must warn you that "the way of the transgressor is hard." Oh, then, begin at Jerusalem, beloved—begin at your own sinful hearts. Beseech your Saviour to come and dwell therein, and enable you to be good, true men to Him.

The services concluded with the singing of a hymn and the benediction.

Temperance Meeting.

There was a very large attendance yesterday at the Forsyth-street M. E. Church, on the occasion of the regular monthly meeting of the Temperance Society attached thereto. The exercises took place under the auspices of Beacon Lodge of Good Templars, and were of a very interesting character. Rev. FREDERICK BROWN presided, and Rev. E. T. JONES and Mr. C. F. LATOUR delivered stirring addresses. An appropriate solo was well sung by a young lady, a member of the Lodge, and several hymns were sung by the audience under the leadership of the Senior Bible Class of the Sabbath School.

The Duty of Sustaining Civil Government—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Thompson.

Rev. Dr. THOMPSON preached last evening at the Broadway Tabernacle, on the duties of Christians toward Government and rulers. He said the incoming Administration cannot escape the three-fold cord which hangs about every Administration elected without sharply-defined party lines. It will be embarrassed by eager expectation, latent opposition and jealous criticism. None of these represent the attitude which a Christian should occupy toward the Government. It is our duty to study to sustain Government as such. With mere political interests the Gospel and consequently the pulpit has no concern. But Government as an institution the Gospel recognizes as ordained of God. Men establish the form of Government and the details of its execution; Government itself rests on a higher authority. The New Testament teaches that we are bound to support Government by the payment of proper taxes; it teaches that Governments are endowed with the sword to terrify evil doers, and it teaches that we owe submission to the laws. The gospel does not, however, require blind obedience. These general rules are modified by other considerations. No law can compel us to act in opposition to the will of God, nor to commit any violation of the truth. The Gospel does not, however, justify violent measures to subvert even an unjust Government for conscience sake. We should commit no wrong, but it is better to submit to injustice then to resort to forcible opposition. Paul, who wrote his injunctions under the rule of Nero, tells us that we may protest against injustice, we may argue against it, we may change the ruler by suitable forms, but we are bound to support the Government. When we see Judges abuse their positions, we may do all in our power, by protests, arguments and the ballot-box to remedy the evil, but we have no right to take the enforcement of justice into our own hands. As to the persons in power it is our duty to give them a fair trial, and to give them our support and encouragement until they prove themselves unworthy. To assume an attitude of critical hostility toward a public officer because we did not chance to vote for him, is to doom the country forever to a rule of alternating parties. Finally the Scriptures enjoin upon us to pray for those in authority, to pray that they may be wise and moderate and honest. We need the interposition of Divine power to stay the corruption of the times.

Sermon by Rev. Philips Brooks Before the Young Men's Christian Association.

As has been usual on such occasions, since the commencement of the series of sermons before the Young Men's Christian Association, Dr. VERMILYE'S Church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-ninth-street, was last evening crowded to excess by an attentive congregation, largely made up of members of the Association and their friends from different churches. Rev. PHILIPS BROOKS preached an eloquent and earnest sermon, taking as his text the words of St. John—"God is light, God is love."

He began by picturing the moral change which has been wrought in the world within the past two centuries, that change being the direct and grand results of the advent of Christ, who embodied in himself God's character of light and love, and then went on to illustrate the necessity of the combination as a moral force whereby the world of mankind is to be purified and elevated nearer to that of God. The Church with light only would be a mere laboratory, a lecture-room. With love alone she would degenerate into mere sentimental ritualism. With both, she is prepared for that high mission whereto God hath ordained her. Light alone in the individual results in a dogmatical philosophy; love alone, in mere promiscuous good-nature. Light and love, the essential elements of God's character, and which he imparts to those who seek it through Christ, are the combination which purifies and elevates the sincere aspirant to the standard of the true Christian. Science and philanthropy, the one illustrating light, the other love, were the two great forces which, moving hand in hand, were to be relied on for the purification and elevation of the world still higher and nearer the Creator in the future as they have been hitherto.

Dedication of Nostrand-avenue, Brooklyn, M. E. Chapel.

The chapel of the Nostrand-avenue M. E. Church, Brooklyn, was duly dedicated yesterday. Rev. R. H. RUST is the pastor. He appears to have labored assiduously to bring this new enterprise to completion. The chapel is a neat Gothic edifice, fronting on Quincy-street forty feet, and running back eighty-five feet. The interior of the building has a high arched ceiling and a rear gallery. The furniture is of black walnut and presents a neat appearance. There is sufficient area to provide comfort to the 500 persons the seats are calculated to accommodate. There is a Sunday school room in the basement of the building. The main edifice will front on Nostrand-avenue, and will measure sixty by ninety feet. The same style will be preserved in the construction of the main building. The location is in a region which is being speedily developed by the ever-increasing population that is gathering from New-York and other crowded neighborhoods. The chapel has already cost $25,000; of this the sum of $17,000 has been paid, leaving a balance of $8,000 to be raised. An effort was made at the various services yesterday to raise $2,500 toward liquidating this debt. The Sunday School is capable of accommodating 400 children, and that number is now in regular attendance.

Bishop JAMES delivered the dedication sermon yesterday forenoon to a crowded congregation. He preached from the text Hebrews, chap. vii., 24th, 25th and 26th verses: "But this man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood," &c.

In the afternoon the Sunday School was addressed by Chaplain C. C. MCCABE, of Ohio, Rev. S. M. HAMMOND, former pastor of the Church, and Mr. WM. CHURCHILL, of Chicago.

Rev. H. B. RIDGEWAY, of St. Paul's M. E. Church, New-York, preached in the evening to a large and deeply interested congregation.

A New Home for the Aged and Indigent.

For some time past subscriptions have been raised in the Church of Rev. Dr. CHAPIN, corner Fifth-avenue and Forty-fifth-street, for the purpose of founding a home for aged and indigent persons of both sexes. A meeting was held on Saturday evening, in the lecture room of the church, for the purpose of furthering the end in view, and deciding on the purchase of ground for the building. The officers of the Association being ladies, Mrs. CHAPIN, the President, Mrs. STITES, the Secretary, and Mrs. D. D. T. MARSHALL, the Treasurer, occupied the platform, while the gentlemen meekly distributed themselves around the hall, and were graciously allowed to speak, when not ruled out of order by the Chair. It was stated that $20,000 had already been raised, and the announcement made of a further donation of $3,000, by several gentlemen unconnected with the Church. A committee, of which Mr. D. D. T. MARSHALL was Chairman, was authorized to select the necessary lots and purchase them.

West Fiftieth-street Presbyterian Church.

The ceremony of installing Rev. JAMES T. WILSON as pastor of the West Fiftieth-street Presbyterian Church, near Eighth-avenue, took place last evening. Rev. Mr. SPALDING opened the services by prayer and reading. Rev. Dr. COX, of Brooklyn, also prayed, and Rev. Dr. ADAMS preached. Rev. Dr. HASTINGS delivered the charge to the congregation, and Rev. Mr. GARDNER that to the new pastor. Mr. WILSON has been officiating in the church for some months. The present building is of wood, and was erected fifteen years ago. Lots have been purchased in Fifty-sixth-street, between Broadway and Seventh-avenue, for a new church, to be built of brick.

THE VELOCIPEDE FUROR.

A Grand Velocipede Tournament to Take Place on Long Island—A Letter from the Park Engineer.

The Managers of the Prospect Park Driving Association, of Brooklyn, have made arrangements to signalize their first annual Spring meeting with a grand velocipede tournament, by which they intend to inaugurate a series of bi-cycle contests on their handsome course during the ensuing Summer. A feature of the Parisian racing meetings now is the velocipede races, and they have proved far more attractive and exciting than even the turf meetings. The Prospect Park Association Course is a level one, and just suited for velocipede riding, and it is to be specially prepared for the races in question, the velocipede contests taking the lead of the horse races on the course of the coming Spring meetings.

It is intended to make this tournament an exhibition of velocipede riding unprecedented in this country, and as the list of entries will be open to all comers, there will of course be considerable competition. The highest rate of speed reached on a Parisian course has been a mile in 2:14, but this was done only on one occasion, and has not been equaled since. A mile in three minutes is very fast time.

The races will be governed by a special code of rules, which will include handicapping for weight of machines and riders, diameter of driving wheels, and extent of headway. The amount which will be presented in prizes will reach $1,500. There will be first, second and third prizes for the greatest speed; prizes for best time made, and prizes for slow riding. The tourney will afford not only an excellent opportunity for a display of skill in American velocipede riding, but also a fair chance to show off the merits of the different styles of velocipedes. There is no doubt of the fact that the races will create an excitement, and we should not be surprised to see 20,000 people there.

All those intending to enter the lists should at once set to work to get themselves in training by practicing road-riding. It will be found to be no child's play to run a mile race on a velocipede against a well-trained proficient, and therefore plenty of practice should be had by all of our leading experts who desire to enter the lists. The tournament will take place the last of April. We shall give due announcement of the details of the programme as soon as the managers have prepared it.

To oblige several Brooklyn correspondents, who desired to learn officially whether velocipede riding was allowed in Prospect Park, we made inquiries at the office of the Commissioners, and from the appended note it will be seen what privileges are accorded to bycycle votaries on the domains of the Park Commissioners:

ENGINEER'S OFFICE, BROOKLYN PARK, }
BROOKLYN, Feb. 26, 1869.

DEAR SIR: The velocipede riders have been and are permitted to make use of the walks of the Park, and are also allowed to use the tarred area or plaza and walks at Fort Greene. The question of the general use of the Park by velocipede riders has not, as yet, been officially acted upon by the Commission. Respectfully yours,

JNO. Y. CUYLER,
Assistant-Engineer in charge.

From the above it will be seen that velocipedists can avail themselves of all the privileges in Prospect Park granted to equestrians, for they can use all the bridle-paths and plazas in the Park. The most important part of the official announcement, however, to Brooklyn velocipedists is that relating to the use of the walks in Washington Park, which park is bounded by Myrtle and De Kalb avenues and Cumberland, Canton and Raymond streets. As all the walks are at their service in this park, and especially the extensive level plaza—concrete paved—on the corner of the Park, Canton-street corner, there will, no doubt, be a rush of velocipedists to this locality as soon as the ice and snow disappear.

This evening another new hall is to be opened to the public in Brooklyn, it being located in the basement hall of the Phœnix Building, No. 16 Court-street. The fact of its being in the immediate vicinity of the fashionable velocipede course on Clinton-street will make it quite a popular resort. The entertainment for the ladies at this hall on the night in question will include an exhibition of riding by the leading experts of the city, and also the first display of a Demorest machine in Brooklyn.

A Mr. QUINN, a resident of Brooklyn, has invented an ingenious improvement in the velocipede by means of which the rider can turn his vehicle to practical use. The wheels are so arranged that riding is unattended with the jolting annoyance now inevitable except on a smooth surface. The elasticity given to the wheels is such as not to impede but rather help the motion of the velocipede in its progress on the street, while the rider is enabled to make crossings and run over cobble-stone pavements with impunity and without jarring. MR. QUINN'S want of the necessary capital is all that prevents the public having the immediate benefit of this useful invention.

Fire in Thirty-Eighth-street.

At 12 o'clock last evening a fire was discovered in the stable of WILLIAM H. WHITE, No. 121 West Thirty-eighth-street, which was not subdued until the building and a large portion of the contents had been consumed. The building was owned by JOSIAH JACKS, and was entirely destroyed, causing a loss of $2,000, on which there is no insurance. Ten horses and several carriages, the property of Mr. WHITE, and valued at $10,000, were consumed. Upon this property there were policies for $7,000, in the Grocers' and Firemen's Insurance Companies. The origin of the fire was not ascertained.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

AS JOHN FELM, aged 42, residence unknown, and his son GEORGE, aged 17, were passing down Seventh-avenue, near Thirtieth-street, at an early hour yesterday morning, they met one JOSEPH RICKETTS, and became involved in an altercation with him. During the fight which ensued, one of the FELMS stabbed RICKETTS in the back with a pocket knife, causing a painful though not dangerous wound. He was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital, and the two assailants arrested by Officer HANLON, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, to await the result of an examination.
